Transit tax hits small firms

CRD demands change in surcharge legislation

By LORRAINE LOCHERTY

Greater Victoria small business owners are complaining bitterly about the transit levy applied to B.C. Hydro accounts by the Capital Region District.

CRD chairman James Campbell confirmed today the Hydro surcharge is unfair and creating serious hardship for small commercial ventures.

Campbell said the regional district has appealed to Municipal Affairs Minister Bill Vander Zalm to amend the Urban Transit Authority Act as soon as possible.

The CRD transit complaint line has been jammed with calls from people complaining about the surcharge.

Vander Zalm's office is also receiving a number of complaints.

A fixed surcharge of $90 a year is charged to all B.C. Hydro commercial accounts regardless of their size.

"It's possible commercial operations with a large number of meters could end up paying the same transit tax as Eaton's," Campbell said.

A surcharge of $12 a year is charged to each residential account.

The surcharge went into effect April 1 and will offset the CRD's share of transit costs.

The CRD selected the Hydro surcharge over two other options offered by the Urban Transit Authority: levying a real property tax or a gasoline surcharge.

But CRD directors did not realize their chosen method of collecting transit tax would create so many problems, Campbell said.

A motel owner with 13 meters told the Times Tuesday he received 13 bills this month and will end up paying an annual transit tax of $1,170 unless something is done to correct the situation.

Barry Savage, owner of the Casa Linda Motel at 364 Goldstream, said 13 bills for $10.65 arrived in the mail Monday.

"Talk about bureaucracy — I got 13 envelopes stuffed with the same literature and 13 stamps," Savage said.

"The system is poorly thought out and persecutes small business," he charged.

He said a number of motel owners with older buildings are in the same situation.

CRD transit director Pat Hogan said non-profit societies, low income housing units, and people with temporary hookups are also complaining about the billing structure.

Hydro is even billing groups it shouldn't, like federal agencies exempt from provincial and local taxes.

Hogan said his office has received a number of protest calls and letters from residents in Port Renfrew, Jordan River and the Gulf Islands.

Residents of those areas don't receive bus service and are being billed at the same rate as the rest of the regional district.

Campbell said the regional district is not getting any help from B.C. Hydro.

"We don't get any co-operation from B.C. Hydro on this. They are sticking to the letter of the law. They won't even tell us the amounts and numbers of the different types of outlets," he said.

"I'm not impressed with B.C. Hydro at all."

The CRD wants amending legislation passed as soon as possible, Campbell said.

"What we're striving for is to have the tax changed from a surcharge to a tax relating to the size of the bill. I am hopeful that legislation will be passed before this session grows much older," he said.

Campbell said he is redirecting the barrage of angry calls to Vander Zalm's office.

"When they speak to me about it I tell them we've applied to have this change and they should speak to their minister."

Quakes swarm through Sierras

Times News Services

MAMMOTH LAKES, Calif. — A swarm of earthquakes, some measuring more than 5 on the Richter scale, rumbled through the snow-capped Sierra Nevada range and its alpine lake resorts today, following three large quakes that jolted most of central California in as many days.

Hundreds of smaller quakes continued to shake more than a 161-kilometre stretch of mountain valleys below the eastern slopes of the range.

"There have been 16 quakes between magnitude 4 and 5 since yesterday, and one over 5.2," a seismology laboratory spokesman said. "There's probably a huge number below 4 we haven't got around to counting yet."

Meanwhile, geologists have found a 24-kilometre-long crack along California's Hilton Creek Fault near the three major earthquakes and more than 70 aftershocks have hit this week, but haven't determined whether it is responsible for the tremors.

The third and largest of the earthquakes hit the High Sierra Mammoth Lakes resort area Tuesday, injuring at least seven persons. It also touched off a gas explosion, triggered landslides and caused widespread minor damage.

Scientists from the U.S. Geological Survey and the California Institute of Technology have set up a base in the east-central California area near the Nevada border to pinpoint the fault responsible for the quakes, geophysicist Carl

Seniors may lose cars over ICBC discount loss

A minimum 33-per-cent increase in basic automobile insurance for Victoria-area senior citizens next year will mean some of them will have to give up their cars, a spokesman said today.

Pauline Barker, executive director of Silver Threads in the city, said the higher rates will be a real hardship for some elderly people.

The increase in their rates will come about as a result of a provincial government policy to drop a 25-per-cent discount on basic coverage for those 65 and over.

The move is part of a policy of removing discrimination on the basis of age, sex, marital status or region from insurance rates.

The Insurance Corp. of B.C. discount will be scrapped Jan. 1, 1981 affecting more than 100,000 elderly drivers.

The aim of the year-old program called FAIR — Fundamental Auto Insurance Rates — is to make an individual's driving record the principal factor in determining how much he or she will pay for automobile insurance.

ICBC spokesman Bob Egby said today when the age discrimination is removed, seniors in the Victoria area will pay the same amount as everyone else, at least 33 per cent more than they're currently paying.

"That 33 per cent is based on this year's rates and doesn't even take into consideration inflation or accident rates, which may force us to up the rates even more next year," he said.

In the Victoria area, basic $100,000-public-liability coverage for an adult aged 25 to 64 driving for pleasure is $141. A senior citizen living in the city pays only $106.

Egby said ICBC made the government aware of a possible problem with rates for the elderly last year, but added "we haven't heard of any changes so far."

Jim Hewitt, the cabinet minister responsible for ICBC, said if the government was going to remove age discrimination from the auto insurance industry, it had to do it "across-the-board."

Barker said she hasn't yet discussed the rate change with Silver Threads members.

"But it is going to be a real hardship for some of them," she said.

Driving a car is not a luxury but a necessity for some who can't walk very far, she added.

Some have been able to keep up with the insurance payments but with the loss of the discount, they will have to cut back and that will likely mean no more driving, she said.

They can't cut back any more on food and accommodation, Barker said, and those are cost items going up everyday.

Barker said the senior citizen groups in the province may have to get together and ask the government to reconsider scrapping the discount.

Gold thieves strike again

Gold thieves hit downtown Victoria overnight for the second time this week.

This time it was the Old Gold Shop, 909 Douglas.

Owner G.W. Joy estimates the loss could run as high as $50,000.

On Tuesday, Baggins in Market Square was robbed and about $3,000 worth of gold jewelry taken.

Police are treating the break-ins as separate incidents.

Joy said in an interview this morning he believes the robbery at his store was the work of professionals.

"They knew what they were after, they only took the heavy gold chains and rings," he said.

When he arrived at the shop early this morning he found empty trays all over the floor.

"They really cleaned me out."

Police said a small window on the south side of the building next to Strathcona Hotel was smashed in and a protective iron grating covering it pried loose.

Showcases and cabinets in a back storage room were rifled and ransacked.

But a safe containing Joy's diamond stocks and other valuables was not touched.

A brown pigskin leather briefcase was missing from Joy's office and police believe the culprits used it to cart off the loot.

Police believe one of the thieves cut himself during the break-in as officers found a trail of blood leading from the lane to the sidewalk east on Courtenay.

There is some suggestion the injured thief went back to the hotel to clean himself as blood stains were discovered on a towel in a bathroom off the lobby.

The blood was first noticed at 12:15 a.m.

An employee in the Cuckoo's Nest cabaret in the hotel saw a man carrying a leather briefcase under his coat enter through a rear door and pass through the nightclub at about 12:30 a.m.

The man is described as about 21, six feet tall, slim, with short dark hair and wearing a short black leather jacket and faded demins.

In the break-in at Baggins, discovered at 10 a.m. Tuesday, thieves removed a plank on a staircase to slip into a service area under the stairs. From there they punched a 14-inch by 12-inch hole through three sheets of gyproc and made their way into the shop.

Items taken included 20 10-carat gold chains measuring 15, 16 and 18 inches in length with Italy stamped on each.

Each of the chains is valued at $100. Also taken were 16 10-carat gold pendants and earring sets with animal designs valued at between $45 to $205 each.

Back in February Rich Elliott became $10,000 richer when he won on the Western Express lottery.

"But I guess lightning does strike twice in the same place," Elliott said today.

His parents, Mr. and Mrs. Wilfred Elliott, picked up $100,000 in Sunday's Provincial draw.

Tennis tourney deadline nears

But time is on its way out along with the wet, wintry weather — time to get those entries in.

The deadline is only three days away: 5 p.m. Saturday. By then, all entries must be either brought into the Times newsroom or in the mail and on their way.

So don't delay or you'll miss out on the biggest and most popular tennis event of the year on Vancouver Island.

Tofino townsfolk turn pirate on U.S. TV signals

By PAT DUFOUR

Since April 8 the townsfolk of Tofino — including Mayor Penny Barr — have been breaking the law and loving it.

That was the day Tofino's 612 residents and the 600 residents on the Indian reserves surrounding it watched American television for the first time.

It's all possible because of a device which the residents helped winch up Barr's Mountain. The device is a dish antenna which receives television signals from the U.S. Satcom 1 satellite and broadcasts them.

It's illegal because no one in Canada is — or can be — licensed to use them.

But Tofino is one of many isolated communities that has an illegal antenna dish.

No one knows how many are out there altogether though the federal department of communications knows of at least 64 in B.C.

One government official believes there are 100, however, and another expert — he installs them — puts the figure about 200, plus another 100 in the Yukon.

"If we were the only ones doing it, that would be different," says Barr.

"It really doesn't worry any one."

What makes the dish devices different is that they just don't distribute regular television but also hone in on American pay television.

Not only is pay-television illegal in Canada, the Tofino residents are watching it without paying.

Right now, the folks in Tofino are watching Home Box Office, which offers around a dozen recent movies a week with no advertising.

Port Angeles residents watching the same station must pay $8.50 per month for that privilege.

Even if Tofino residents were willing to pay, HBO does not have the right to sell its service in Canada.

Tofino's antenna dish may be criminal but it's no Godfather that's responsible for bringing it to the west coast town.

The man responsible is 31-year old Ald. Gavin Guppy.

Guppy runs the hardware department of the Tofino Consumers Co-op and its the co-op that shelled out $45,000 to buy and assure maintenance for the antenna and two television transmitters.

The equipment allows it to choose any two of 12 channels that include not only HBO, but four satellite-borne superstations, so-called because they can be seen anywhere on the continent.

Showing these in Canada is also illegal since American cable companies have to pay for the signals.

The Tofino antenna can bring in two stations, HBO plus another. Guppy says at the moment, the residents are watching WOR New York but members have now voted to try KTTV San Francisco, at least for a while.

For a while they had been watching a station from Atlanta, Georgia.

"It's made quite a difference to the town," Guppy says, adding he's now studying ways of getting still more feeds, specifically a good CTV signal.

Betty and Chuck Gorcak, who run the Schooner Inn motel, are two of the most enthusiastic viewers.

Up to April 8, Tofino residents were only able to watch CBC, which the town gets on a tiny half-watt local transmitter that becomes a hit-and-miss affair in summer or in snow.

"The people in Ucluelet can get cablevision but we can't. I don't want to open my mouth and put my foot in it — but we've waited for years and years and years," Mrs. Gorcak says.

Even a former member of the RCMP believes it's the best thing that's happened to the town in years.

He's gas station operator Harry Tieleman, who is also a former village councillor.

Tofino has no theatre, rink or swimming pool and 1979 was a bad one for vandalism.

Tielemen sees HBO as a cure for vandalism and juvenile delinquency, even if the television comes in the stolen goods category.

"When a good movie is on you can't see any of the kids. This place is rampant with alcoholism. Now, they'll buy a case of beer and go home and watch HBO."

The distribution of HBO is spreading in Canada. It is even seen on some licenced cable-TV systems.

While they're gambling with their licences from the Canadian Radio-Television and Telecommunications Commission, the companies find it attractive in areas that have little or no entertainment.

Why is such a badly-needed service illegal?

Because the Intelsat treaty and a Canadian-U.S. agreement both forbid either of the countries from receiving signals from the other's satellite.

Guppy says, however, that most American businesses look benignly on pirate townships like Tofino.

"Most of the products they advertise on television are used by Canadians," he says.

Knocking, cry heard in mine

VAL D'Or, Que. (CP) — Rescue efforts continued today amidst hope that at least some of the eight gold miners trapped underground by a cave-in more than a week ago may still be alive.

On Tuesday, workers searching for the trapped men reported hearing knocking sounds and a muffled cry for help. But there has been no confirmation of contact with any of the missing men since then.

Rescue efforts had to be halted for a few hours overnight, while Louis Tanguay, chief provincial mines inspector, checked the Belmoral Mine for evidence that another cave-in might be in the offing.

A rescue worker said Tuesday he had knocked five times on the wall at the 60-metre level of the mine — the same level where Gilles Legare, 32, and Guy Daigle, 28, had been working when the cave-in occurred eight days ago.

Five knocks came in response.

"He (the rescuer) knocked a second time, but there was no answer," said Quebec provincial police Constable Jacques Letourneau in a telephone interview from the mine's office.

A second rescuer working nearby also heard knocking as well as a muffled cry, Letourneau said.

'Sis' rocks volcano as molten lava rolls

Johnson of the geological survey said.

The Hilton Creek Fault, which is still active, caused similar series of quakes in 1927 and 1941.

The latest tremors occurred south of an area where an 1872 earthquake raised the elevation of the Sierras by about six metres.

The pattern of earthquakes — including a brace of magnitude 6 tremors Sunday — that has struck the Mammoth Lakes area is similar to other seismic sequences in California and Nevada that were eventually capped by magnitude 7 or greater shocks, a University of Nevada scientist says.

Alan Ryall, a university geophysicist, said this pattern has been observed in the cases of the 1952 Kern County earthquake, the 1954 Fairview Peak (Nev.) earthquake, and the 1971 earthquake in the San Fernando Valley of Los Angeles.

There were also new developments on the Washington state volcano scene today as smoldering Mount St. Helens and its sister peak, Mount Margaret, were rocked by a pair of moderate earthquakes.

The epicentres of the quakes were under 2,900-km Mount Margaret, which borders volcano-scarred Spirit Lake and is located about 12 km north-by-northwest of Mount St. Helens.

The quakes registering 4.0 and 3.8 on the Richter scale, occurred at 7:15 a.m., and were felt as far away as Kelso and Longview, Wash., 64 km to the west.

There were no reports of damage, but geologists keeping a close watch on the two mountain peaks.

It was not known what connection there was between the quakes and the Mount St. Helens volcano.

The quakes were the first significant seismic activity near the volcano since a 90-minute harmonic tremor hummed through the mountain Tuesday, prompting the hurried recall of air and ground search teams from the mountain.

So far, the official death toll stands at 21 with 71 persons listed as missing.

Scientists today said molten rock was again moving beneath the volcano's surface for the first time since the cataclysmic May 18 explosion.

Harmonic tremors, indicating the rising or falling of magma (molten rock), rocked the mountain for several hours Tuesday while the volcano coughed plumes of smoke 24,000 km high, thwarting a resumption of the military's search and rescue missions.

A dozen helicopters still searching the mountain for victims from the May 18 explosion rushed back to base after the tremors were recorded.

The U.S. Geological Survey reported no new bulging of the crater, but warned the volcano contained gas, making it capable of further explosions that could spew debris over wide areas of the Northwest.

Washington Gov. Dixy Lee Ray, addressing the state in a broadcast from Seattle, said there is no major health hazard from the volcanic ash, which has covered much of the state, but cautioned individuals to wear face masks at all times when exposed to the airborne dust.

In B.C., it was announced the provincial environment ministry will increase its monitoring of the atmosphere and water supplies in preparation for another possible eruption.

However, Washington state authorities say B.C. will not receive a significant amount of dust from the volcano should it erupt a third time, says Geoff Amy, spokesman for the provincial emergency program.

Amy said water supplies were being inspected regularly for dust contamination and filtration will be increased if a large quantity of dust falls on water sources.

A broad trough of cool moist air remains over B.C. keeping skies generally cloudy and temperatures below normal. Shower activity decreased overnight as the trough weakened and began moving eastwards. a ridge of high pressure is still building off the coast and will move over B.C. as the trough moves into Alberta. This will result in some sun by Thursday which will allow temperatures to rise towards normal values. This broad ridge should remain with us for several days once it has become established over the province.

Ocean better than land as waste disposal site

VANCOUVER (CP) — The world's oceans are a handy global garbage can and could be part of the answer to the world's waste disposal problem, say a group of U.S. scientists.

Dr. Edward Goldberg, a California geochemist, says he is one of 70 American chemists, physicists and biologists who believe "the oceans of the world should be assessed to see their ability to accommodate part of human waste."

Of the world's three available waste receptacles — land, air and water — oceans are the least developed as a dumping ground for the three billion tons of garbage produced each year, Goldberg said in an interview.

Goldberg blamed the mystique of oceanographer Jacques Cousteau for creating a misguided loyalty towards the world's oceans and said people must recognize a tradeoff is necessary if the world is to cope with a growing population and its unpleasant side effects.

"I think there has developed in our lay citizenry a view that the oceans are sacred and that nothing should be poured into the ocean — that it should be left on land," said Goldberg. "But we've used the oceans for centuries as a waste disposal."

The current emphasis on land disposal systems is jeopardizing valuable underground water systems, he said.

Goldberg said that by using coastal waters more selectively, the result could mean less environmental damage in the long run. A disposal site could not be considered in areas where marine life, recreation facilities or transportation routes would be jeopardized, he said.

However, one area where an ocean disposal system is working effectively is in the United Kingdom where radioactive waste has been dumped in the Irish Sea for years without any environmental repercussions, he said.

The Southern California coast, from Los Angeles to the Mexican border, now receives domestic waste from 11 million people without any undesirable effect.

"We're going to have more Love Canals unless we consider the oceans as an alternative disposal site," he said, referring to the evacuation this month of 700 families living near an abandoned chemical dump site in the Love Canal area of Niagara Falls, N.Y.

Goldberg is a chemistry professor at the Scripps Institution of Oceanography at the University of California in San Diego.

Volcano's casualty list includes loss of livestock, pets, wildlife

VANCOUVER (CP) — It's not only people who died and were left missing following the cataclysmic eruption of Mount St. Helens May 18. The destruction also included a massive loss of wildlife and the abandonment of thousands of domesticated pets.

Washington State humane societies have asked for financial assistance from other groups in the Pacific Northwest, including Vancouver's SPCA, to take care of them all, Kenneth Hemmerick, administrative assistant, said Tuesday.

"There is wildlife coming down the mountain looking for refuge and not finding it", he said. "There is the incredible problem of domestic animals, it's a massive problem."

The SPCA is collecting money for a Washington State coalition called Washington State Animals in Need to help pay for animal rescue efforts, he said.

"What we are asking is for people to send donations to the Vancouver branch of the SPCA earmarked WAIN and we'll send a cheque to them (in Washington)."

The money will be used to buy food for domestic and livestock animals abandoned without food in the Kelso, Wa., area and airlifts to bring endangered animals out of volcanic dust-covered areas to safety, he said.

"In the 32 kilometre radius around Mt. St. Helens there has been a terrific loss of life and in the Kelso area there has been abandonment of farm and domestic animals," he said.

"Airlifts have been used to take the animals out. The cost of that is $300 an hour. There is a shortage of food and, in particular, hay and alfalfa."

Hemmerick said federal aid and search teams have concentrated on human problems caused by the volcano while the humane societies are concentrating solely on the effects of the eruption and dust fallout on animals.

The volcano erupted May 18 in a massive burst, killing at least 21 people, leaving another 68 missing and flattening thousands of hectares of timber before sending an enormous plume of volcanic dust and ash across five states and three Canadian provinces.

The eruption of Mount St. Helen's will add to the troubles already plaguing British Columbia ranchers, says the president of the B.C. Cattlemen's Association.

The volcanic ash which has covered hay fields will lower hay production this summer and thereby raise prices for hay imported into the province, Tim Bayliff said in an interview in Kamloops Tuesday.

Bayliff said hay prices are not the only problem faced by ranchers this year. If a drought in the Prairies continues, the germination of feed grains will be retarded, pushing the price of feed upward, he said.

As well, beef must continue to compete with abundant supplies of pork for the consumer's dollar, he said.

While the short-term outlook for the cattle industry is poor, Bayliff said the long-range forecast is good.

Cool couple snitches gems

VANCOUVER (CP) — They coolly looked over the tray of diamonds, expressed their appreciation, and left the premises without making a purchase. But they didn't leave empty-handed.

With $2,807 worth of diamonds securely in their clutches, the suave couple left Pyramid Gems and Gold Ltd. after switching the diamonds for cheap zircon fakes. The fakes were locked up by the owner with the remaining legitimate diamonds Friday afternoon and weren't discovered until Monday.

And, so effective was their ploy, Vancouver police have issued a warning to jewellers to beware the debonair duo, who have snatched a total of $5,000 in diamonds from two downtown stores.

One suspect is described as a 50-year-old male, wearing a grey, three-piece suit and black shoes. The police report states he "uses" a British accent. His accomplice is an equally urbane woman in her 20s.

The first robbery occurred at Rare Earth Gems Ltd., where the man said he wanted to buy a larger diamond for his partner, police said. The owner left the two alone with the display while he attended another customer.

It was a $2,200 error in judgment.

Accident row nets injury payment

VANCOUVER (CP) — A 27-year-old Surrey man who lost his sight in both eyes following a confrontation over a car accident was awarded a lump sum payment of $7,500 and a periodic award of $362 a month under the Criminal Injury Compensation Act.

The man was hit by the driver of the other vehicle involved and knocked to the ground, suffering a severe head injury.

The Workers Compensation Board announced Tuesday that 22 awards totalling $97,105 were given out in April.

Under the compensation act, anyone who is a victim of crime in B.C. may apply for compensation.

Former MacBlo exec convicted

VANCOUVER (CP) — The former manager of MacMillan Bloedel's log trading division was convicted in Assize Court late Tuesday of corruptly accepting benefits of over $180,000 for favoring certain buyers.

Dennis Richard Binstead was convicted of six counts of a seven-count indictment in a case that began eight years ago. He was remanded by Justice Harry McKay to Friday for sentence.

Binstead was convicted on two of the counts with accepting benefits totalling $101,342 from Douglas Edward MacKinnon and Charles P. Anderson, successful operators of log brokerages and log sales firms on Vancouver Island.

He was also convicted of accepting from MacKinnon shares in capital stock of Doman Industries Ltd. for showing favor and also accepting from MacKinnon two gold bars with a value of $12,834.

On another count he was convicted of accepting $48,000 from MacKinnon and on still another count was convicted of accepting $25,000 from Anderson.

It was the second trial for Binstead. His first trial last year ended in an acquittal but the Crown appealed and the B.C. Court of Appeal directed a new trial.

Anesthetic death still a mystery

VANCOUVER (CP) — Despite an autopsy, it remains a mystery why a four-year-old Vancouver boy died after being given a general anesthetic for dental surgery.

The autopsy revealed some pneumonia in the lungs, and signs of brain damage from lack of oxygen, said pathologist Margaret Norman, but didn't reveal why the brain had been oxygen-deprived. She says there is a small group of children who have suddenly collapsed without reason.

The pathologist was testifying at the inquest of Darcy Leo, who never regained consciousness and died in hospital five days after receiving an anesthetic Feb. 15.

Dr. Gordon Loader said he first saw the boy in October and found that "his mouth was in very bad shape — there was rampant decay with almost every tooth involved."

The dentist said that because the boy was apprehensive, it took more than 45 minutes to do two fillings which normally take 10 minutes.

"He was reacting to the sound of the drill, he was jumping around in the chair and wouldn't keep his mouth open," said Loader.

He said he advised the boy's mother to have all the remaining dental work done at once under general anesthetic, rather than doing it during five visits that would be "extremely traumatic."

The work was scheduled and the youngster was put to sleep without difficulty, said Loader, adding there were no signs of trouble during the 1½ hours he worked.

The anesthestist was present throughout except for one brief period, and there was a pulse monitor attached to the boy's thumb.

Loader said that the problems began when the boy was taken off the anesthetic machine, and estimated the child's heart stopped beating on its own for more than 30 minutes.

The anesthestist, Dr. W. K. Maxwell and his assistant Dr. Duk Hee Choi, kept the boy breathing by mechanical means, said Loader.

The inquest continues today.

Gov't authority doubts raised on Gambier mine

VANCOUVER (CP) — The provincial cabinet's authority to approve development of an open-pit copper-molybdenum mine on Gambier Island in Howe Sound has been questioned by a University of B.C. law professor.

The proposed development would invalidate the Islands Trust, which was established by the provincial government to preserve and protect Gambier and other islands in the Sound and Georgia Strait, Dr. Andrew Thompson told a public meeting Monday night.

"The proposed open-pit mine is clearly contrary to the trust objectives," he said. "Yet the cabinet is postponing a decision and calling for studies.

"This must mean that the question which the cabinet is really faced with is whether it is prepared to override the trust objectives in favor of mining."

Three-quarters of the island was staked in 1978 and has been under exploration by 20th Century Energy Corp. for possible mine development.

A fine balance

Members of the Legislature's committee on MLAs' privileges remain unhappy with statements last month by Bob Simson, head of the province's Co-ordinated Law Enforcement Unit.

Simson was quoted as saying that pliable politicians were a great advantage to organized crime and, to combat this threat, police needed the power in special circumstances to use electronic surveillance methods such as bugging and wiretapping.

The committee, composed exclusively of MLAs, has been working for the past couple of months to determine whether such surveillance violates an MLA's special parliamentary privileges, using as an example the case of Consumer and Corporate Affairs Minister Jim Nielsen. He was under surveillance for about a year because it was suspected that two men might offer him a bribe. Although the committee's deliberations are not yet complete, it is increasingly clear that the committee will decide that surveillance does infringe on a member's special privileges and should be banned in all circumstances.

The balance that must be struck is exceedingly fine.

The list of confidential subjects discussed by Nielsen in tapped telephone calls was indeed long: pollution control strategy, Crown land matters, government policies, legislative committee and caucus business, budgetary items, and legislation pending. Many of those items involved cabinet secrecy, one of the roots of the parliamentary system. It seems grossly inappropriate that the police could break that confidentiality thousands of times because they suspected that sometime in the next 12 months or so, somebody might try to offer a bribe.

It is, moreover, important that citizens are free to talk to their MLAs in confidence. If they want to complain about police behavior, for instance, they should be assured the police aren't listening in on the call. The loss of that freedom would be the loss of a precious part of our democratic system.

On the other hand, to ban completely any wiretapping of MLAs' telephones would be to issue a carte blanche invitation to every B.C. criminal, organized or otherwise, to try bribing or threatening MLAs or cabinet ministers. Even worse, any MLA could accept a bribe, secure in the knowledge he was virtually immune from detection and prosecution. While 99 per cent of our elected officials are entirely honest and would reject these advances out of hand, there remains the possibility that eventually one would begin to make deals, knowing he could not be caught.

This is the situation Simson is desperately trying to avoid.

The age-old argument that the place to deal with dishonest politicians is at the ballot box really cannot apply in these cases because, without surveillance, voters may never know of the politician's dishonesty.

On this basis, it would be sensible for the government and the MLAs to lay down extremely strict rules governing the circumstances in which a member may be placed under surveillance. It should be agreed, for instance, that surveillance should be allowed only when the MLA himself is suspected of wrongdoing, not when police hope only that an MLA's calls may help them catch other wrongdoers.

It might also be agreed that when an MLA's phone is to be tapped, the usual requirement that a judge grant an authorization for the tap be supplemented by a rule that the Attorney-General of Canada also approve the surveillance. The attorney-general, being a politician himself, would be especially sensitive to the issues of legislative privilege and would presumably not allow the tapping unless convinced of its necessity.

Parliamentary privilege should be protected and cherished, but not at the expense of putting our elected officials above the criminal law.

Count to ten

Come on, Rafe. Just because the president of the B.C. Medical Association took a pot shot at your government doesn't mean that you as the provincial health minister need duck out of the BCMA's annual convention.

It's not as if the president asked you to don a stethoscope and then yelled into it: "the Social Credit government is weak!" Everyone is entitled to his or her opinion and to express it. Taking the slight personally is unbecoming of a seasoned politican.

Only a few weeks back you swore off Vancouver Sun reporters because you figured they misconstrued your comments about the solidarity of the Socred caucus behind its leader.

If you keep this up, you may end up with a politician's nightmare: something to say but no one to say it to.

High noon in Columbus

Jimmy Carter takes on Ronald Reagan in a battle for the crowds.

COLUMBUS, Ohio — It will be high noon Thursday for Jimmy Carter and Ronald Reagan here in Columbus, and both sides look forward to their first political duel.

They have scheduled simultaneous noontime rallies five blocks apart on High Street aimed at the June 3 primary. Already their partisans are competing over crowd turnout. Television stations are arranging helicopter coverage to pan from one rally to the other, giving a preview of what is expected to be a tough fall campaign, especially in major battlegrounds like Ohio.

The Reagan camp scheduled its rally first, and it will start first, at 11:45 A.M. But ever-competitive, Carter strategists moved in late and now count on the magnetic attraction of the presidency to steal the limelight from the former California governor. Moreover, they will have Carter speak at noon sharp, just ahead of Reagan's appearance at 12:30.

Actor or president

"It's a conflict of schedules that's turned into a battle over who's going to have the bigger event," said Jerry Austin, the Carter campaign chief in Ohio, obviously relishing this turn of events. "It's a fitting way to end the primary season and to start another season. We'll just see what happens — whether people want to see the actor or see the president."

Some Carter campaign workers said Austin had sensed and seized an opening for head-to-head competition with the Republican leader, but he said things had developed accidentally. "We knew Reagan would be in town Thursday, but we didn't know his rally was at this time," Austin said. "But I would not have shied away from this. Jimmy Carter's got nothing to lose on this one."

The Reagan camp was unfazed. "If these are going to be the basic contenders, let's get started," said Carolyn Kartavich, a Reagan organizer in Ohio. "I think," she added with a chuckle, "it would really be super if we could get them together for a little debate."

One reason for the Reagan camp's optimism is the backing of Gov. James A. Rhodes, who is expected to turn out several thousand state employees to hear Reagan.

Each side has chosen a dramatic setting. Governor Rhodes is to introduce Reagan outside the State Capitol, and Carter will have a soaring visual backdrop, the Nationwide Plaza Building, with a silhouette like the United Nations in New York.

To pump up enthusiasm, the Carter camp has printed 100,000 leaflets inviting the public to "Come, See, Hear President Carter," and has distributed them at the zoo, public parks and the Memorial Day parade here Monday. The Reagan camp will hand out 10,000 circulars at downtown intersections Tuesday and Wednesday.

But the event's significance goes beyond the inevitable debate about turnout because it foreshadows a sharp contest next fall over Ohio's 25 electoral votes.

Reagan has targeted Ohio as a key state in his Northern strategy of trying to lure traditional blue-collar support from the Democrats. For Carter, Ohio will be a crucial bellwether, as it was in 1976. Four years ago, his 11,026-vote victory here over President Ford was vital to his nationwide victory.

Already, both Democrats and Republicans are saying that Carter is extremely vulnerable because of spreading unemployment and uneasiness over the economy, especially in such traditional Democratic strongholds as Cleveland, Toledo and Youngstown, as well as general disaffection with him among independents and Democrats.

A statewide poll published Sunday by The Cincinnati Enquirer showed Carter and Reagan running even with 37 percent each and 26 percent undecided. It also showed that if Rep. John B. Anderson of Illinois succeeded in getting on the ballot, he would draw more votes from Carter and possibly tip Ohio to Reagan.

"It's going to be a horse race in November," conceded Paul Tipps, the ardently pro-Carter Democratic Party chairman in Ohio. "This is a moderate — not a liberal — state where a guy like Reagan is going to get a good hearing. One key to November is how well we put the party back together after the primaries."

Poor record

"Carter has to give those of us who are now on the other side some reason to go out and get our clocks cleaned," asserted Timothy Hagan, the pro-Kennedy Democratic Party chairman for the Cleveland area. "The 35-to-40 percent of the party that's alienated has to have a reason to be for him. You can't defend Jimmy Carter's record."

Kennedy strategists here are smarting over some Carter campaign ads. They dispute some statewide polls showing the president leading Sen. Edward M. Kennedy by 2 to 1, but acknowledge that Carter is now 10 to 15 percentage points ahead of the senator, who will be speaking in Cleveland while the president and Reagan are in Columbus.

Looking at Islam

I saw "Death of a Princess" and, while sorry for the princess, I was fascinated by the film. It dealt fairly with Islam, the conflict between Arab and Western cultures, and the obvious fact that, by and large, Arab men and women are reasonably happy in their religion and their way of life. To me, the film was a good documentary of Arab life, culture and law under Islam, fairly and factually done, and held together with the story of the princess's life and death.

The average Christian Westerner may see the beheading of the princess and the rather dreadful killing of her lover as hideous crimes. We should remember that as a world religion, Islam is quite young. The Islamic lunar calendar began with the Hegira, 622A.D. If the Arabs used our calendar (they don't), the current year would be their year 1358. What happened in our year 1358? The early Inquisition was in full swing; in Western Christian 1480 the Spanish Inquisition was reorganized and "conducted its proceedings from the beginning and through the 16th century with extreme severity". (Webster's Unabridged Dictionary). I am quite sure that the thousands of victims of the Inquisition who were broken on the rack, boiled in oil, killed horribly and slowly in the Iron Maiden, and burned at the stake, would have thanked heaven devoutly if, instead, they could have been beheaded. They were not so favored! We might also recall that Giordano Bruno was burned at the stake by the Italian Inquisition in 1600 (Shakespeare was still alive); Galileo barely escaped the same fate in 1633. (No, I'm not Muslim.)

Certainly no Christian has the right to cast even a pebble at Islam. We should try to see the Islamic cultures through Islamic eyes, just as anthropologists try to see a foreign culture through the eyes of its people. Conversely, the Arabs should view our culture through our eyes. Such mutual understanding might prevent a jihad! — C. Crittenden, 503-890 Academy Close.

On the waterfront

I have read and many times listened to the great trade and commerce centre controversy. If my memory serves me correctly, it was a little over 10 years ago that a similar situation came up when Marathon Realty (CP's property developer) proposed a conference centre on the parking site adjacent to the Empress Hotel. This proposal, after being cut to pieces with political discussions and input both positive and negative from the general public, was finally scrapped.

Now the Pan Pacific Society has been working diligently to develop a complex that Victoria should have had years ago. Let's not make the same mistake again and have to wait a further 10 years.

Ten years ago I managed a convention facility capable of handling 2,000 delegates. One of my larger conventions housed some 8,000 delegates for a 10-day period during the shoulder months. This brought into the city over $2 million.

It is estimated by the Pan Pacific Society that in the first year's operation some $7 million will be generated in the City of Victoria. The Canadian government travel bureau estimates that this infusion of new money circulates 3½ times around the community.

That's why convention business is not only big, but highly competitive.

The vital question of location seems to be the highlight of the debate. Tell me what better location could the Pan Pacific Society have chosen? Remember we are going to attract people from all over the universe. Should we not show off what we are proud of? Yes, by all means keep it on the waterfront in the proposed site. It's convenient to all facilities, hotels, shopping, general attractions, and above all to the amenities that are so important to the conventioneer. By all means let's build it and be proud of it.

The foresight of the Pan Pacific Society in providing a facility which would encourage persons to come to the community, many of them in the off tourist season, and pump that much money into the city's economic bloodstream is indeed rewarding.

Trite as the saying may be, convention money to any city is the next best thing to found money. — Les M. Lee, 1233 Reynolds Road.

Transit bill

I protest the way one level of government is shirking its responsibility by allowing the little business person and average homeowner to be walloped in the face again.

I am talking about the transit levy that the Capital Regional District is collecting by utilizing B.C. Hydro as its hatchetman. They are going to collect $90 a year per business (large or small) and $12 a year from the homeowner. This addition to the hydro bill is hard on people who budget within pennies to be able to feed their family.

I feel it is the government's responsibility to provide transit for its citizens.

I resent more than anything the government's method and wonder if others do too. I feel that if we the small people let these things pass without a fight then we will have no one to blame but ourselves when we are finally gobbled up by bureaucratic strongarm methods. — Leanne M. Jones, 2516 Rothesay Avenue, Sidney.

Pollen a hero

Peter Pollen is the hero of historic-minded Victorians for his unselfish dedication to preservation of the best of this beautiful city while he was its mayor.

His concern about development of the Inner Harbor (letter, Pollen's view, May 15) and the harm that might be done by a chairman "so aggressive, so personally involved in land deals, development, amusement exhibits," as Alderman Bob Wright, is obviously warranted. The Inner Harbor is as unique as Fujiyama, and should be treated as reverently. Victoria, and all the peninsula should be on guard that this precious bit of B.C. should not be vandalized by commercialism, as were the beaches of Vancouver in the '60s.

All the peninsula and Victoria should be concerned, too, about the threat that Bob Wright is now posing to the Tsehum Harbour Bird Sanctuary and its essential environs.

Bob Wright's marina-expansion/land development plans in Tsehum Harbor peninsula will destroy the "habitat protection" forever of a very vital, unique North Saanich bird sanctuary.

Last council, elected on the promise they would do so, turned down his many "deals" for land development and water leases in the bird sanctuary mud flats. The 25-acre land adjacent to the bird sanctuary was still in the Agricultural Land Reserve.

Against protests from North Saanich council, the ALC removed the 25 acres from ALR, and Wright now is taunting the North Saanich council with unacceptable placement of development to get a "trade-off" of water leases in the sanctuary. — G. Lawrie, 10255 West Saanich Road, Sidney.

Non-profit housing

Suitable housing for all people is one of the most essential needs; it should be placed on a non-profit public utility basis. Low-standard and high-cost housing is one of the main causes of the developing low morale of our people.

Vancouver rentalsman Jim Patterson is supposed to be serving the public interest, but he is doing just the opposite with his proposal that the B.C. government subsidize private interest to the tune of $90 million a year for the next eight years. Less than five years ago such giveaway subsidies were in force with the result we got higher rent increases, taxes, housing and mortgage costs, while developers and real estate concerns reaped and continue to reap high profits.

Hopefully we have a number in parliament and civic office who will fight that proposal down this time around. There is only one way the housing crisis can be solved in the people's interest and that is by eliminating the profit incentive, which can be done by setting up a housing authority composed of responsible people from workers; unions, religious, community, fraternal and other organizations whose concerns are for people.

As a senior citizen with old age problems that limit my active ability, I can do little more than hope some viable younger persons will get involved and provide good leadership in resolving the housing problem. — D. Frankham, 304-373 Burnside Road.

Build a bridge

As a Canadian teaching English in China, I am both excited by the increasing number of exchanges of people and ideas between this country and the West, and disappointed at how little of it occurs between China and Canada. Canada has enjoyed "normalization" with China, and very warm relations for some time, but now, as practical work is going on for trade and for academic exchange, we are again being overshadowed by the United States.

China is making ambitious plans to send scholars in many fields abroad to study; scholarships are being offered by colleges and universities in Britain and the United States. Why not by similar institutions in Canada? Canada has much to offer and much to gain. Here at Zhongshan University, one of the six key universities in China, one of the six designated to play a major role in the development of a modern society, people are working hard to make up for lost time, to find out what was going on in the West while China was hidden behind closed doors. In our department we are hampered in this by the lack of people who can adequately deal with the literature of the West. The concentration has been on linguistics; the awareness of modern literature is limited to that which passed Russian scrutiny in the mid-'50s. We desperately need to send young scholars abroad to study English literature and to be immersed in the culture which produced it.

Would it not be to the advantage of any Canadian university to offer free tuition to one or more of such eager young people from this institution? Would it not be possible for a Canadian university to encourage the citizens of a community to cover the costs of air fare and board and room? I turn to British Columbia universities because it was in that province that I received my training and it was in modern languages methods courses at UVic that I really gained an insight into the culture of other peoples.

This is a bridge that I would like to help to build. — Ms. Linda Ironside, Department of Foreign Languages, Zhongshan University, Guangzhou, People's Republic of China.

Donations, please

My tax notice just received from the Corporation of Saanich indicates an increase of 17 per cent over last year. What will the increase be next year when we, the taxpayers, will have the pleasure of paying the legal costs of both sides, and probably those of the developer, in the Tillicum Shopping Centre caper?

In the meantime, may I suggest to Mayor Couvelier that he approach all the lawyers engaged in the case for donations to the coffers of the Municipality as marks of their appreciation. — D. B. Lorimer, 2876 Wyndeatt Avenue.

'The gift of life' from volcanoes

By MALCOLM W. BROWNE
New York Times

The eruptions of Mount St. Helens are remarkable not only for their destructive pyrotechnics but because of their seeming rarity. Volcanologists surmise that the mountain is likely to erupt violently only once in 10,000 years.

Few big volcanic eruptions are easily remembered. One that readily comes to mind (because of its contributions to archeology and art museums) is the Vesuvian burial of Pompeii 19 centuries ago. The 1883 eruption of Krakatoa is memorable because it killed 36,000 people — probably a record. Mont Pelee in 1902 was another big killer. But it's hard to think of many others in that league.

The impression of volcanic rarity is human, however, not geological. Geologists, as they contemplate the cataclysm in Washington, are able to put it into a perspective that is almost philosophical. Dr. Martin Prinz, a volcanologist at the American Museum of Natural History in New York, notes that the earth began with a surface virtually consisting of one continuous volcano and that, although volcanic activity has slowed since then, it has never halted.

In fact, volcanoes are as natural for planets (and even such moons as Jupiter's Io) as breathing is for mammals. Earth's volcanic pulse has persisted since nearly the start of its 4.6 billion years of existence, including the past thousandth of that history in which the human race has existed.

One geological record stretching far into the past lies dramatically exposed in Antarctica, where the broken edges of glaciers are grained with dark horizontal lines as closely spaced as tree rings. Those lines mark volcanic eruptions in many parts of the world whose ash eventually settled on Antarctica's fresh snow to be compacted over the ages into ice. Some trace of Mount St. Helens will one day take its place in such stratified ice, to be read by future geologists.

Early man created mythologies to account for volcanoes. Old civilizations depicted monsters at work in the cores of volcanoes — giant whales (in Chile), giant spiders (in Japan), giant snakes (in Indonesia), cyclops (in Greece) and various gods and giants. Modern science has scourged the supernatural but replaced it with some images scarcely more reassuring.

No more than 31 miles beneath our feet lies a real hell, in the form of searing, compressed magma — something startlingly similar to a "river of fire" imagined by Plato. Plato did not guess why his river Pyriphlegethon stayed hot, but today it is known that earth is like an immense nuclear reactor that has suffered a core meltdown. The natural radioactivity of uranium and other elements in the earth's makeup help keep all but the outer layer of our planet very hot. This cracked, shifting crust, which contains the underground magma, frequently springs leaks in the form of volcanoes.

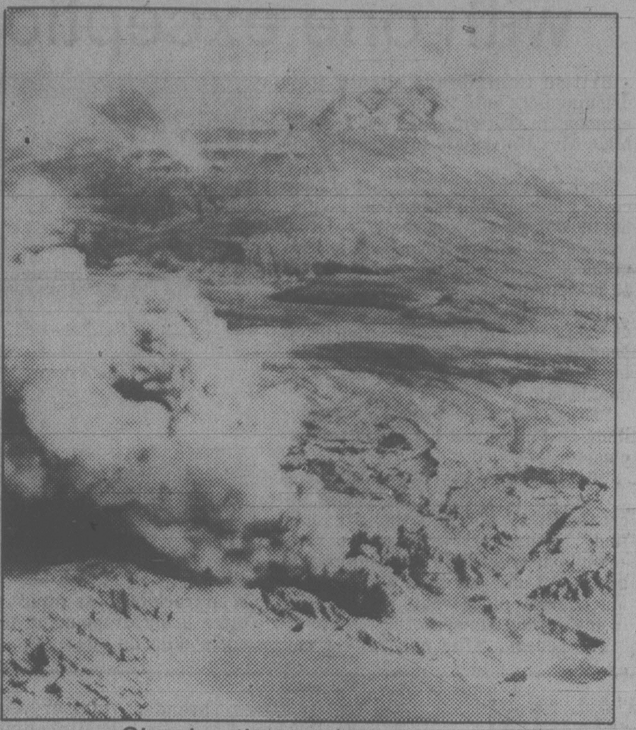
But with all their faults, volcanoes gave earth mountains, seas, air, islands and the environment necessary for life. Prinz says it would be difficult to imagine life existing without volcanoes.

Over the eons, earth's scorching innards have vented enough steam through volcanoes to cover two-thirds of the world with water, and enough oxygen and nitrogen to give us an atmosphere. Without these gifts, earth would be as barren as the moon, whose volcanoes died out some three billion years ago.

Volcanoes brew many of the chemicals needed for life. The ash they sow over vast areas is rich in phosphorus and potassium, and the land it covers eventually becomes fertile and rich.

Volcanoes, like refiners' fires, cough up and concentrate useful things — obsidian for making sharp stone tools, copper for making even better ones, gold and silver to buy them with. Flows of magma lay down ores of uranium, aluminum, mercury, nickel, lead, sulphur and much more.

Our world was made and shaped by volcanoes, for better or worse.

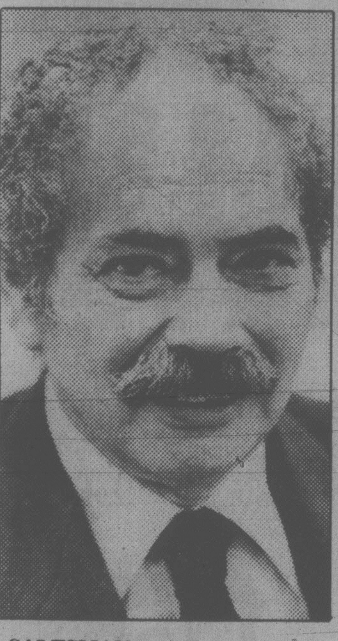


Shaping the earth over eons

Economic control: Doesn't anyone care?

By WALTER STEWART

HURTIG . . . discouraged



SALTSMAN . . . other concerns

OTTAWA — Canadian economic nationalism, once a hardy flower, is now a wilting weed.

This is not because there has been a lessening in foreign economic control — the catalyst for the nationalism movement — only in concern about the subject.

In 1957, the Royal Commission on Canada's Economic Prospects (the Gordon Report) began to worry, mildly, about domination of the national economy by U.S. interests:

"There is concern that as the position of American capital in the dynamic resource and manufacturing sectors becomes ever more dominant, our economy will inevitably become more integrated with that of the United States."

At that time, U.S. investment in this country totalled just over $10 billion. It represented 76 per cent of the $13.4 billion in total foreign investment.

The Spring, 1980 issue of Foreign Investment Review, the journal of the Foreign Investment Review Agency, has just come out with the news that U.S. investment here now tops $65 billion. It has grown more than six-fold since the Gordon Report, and is still at roughly the same share of all foreign investment — it is now 75 per cent.

American investment is doubling here every eight years, growing at more than $6 billion annually. To put it another way, American capital in Canada is increasing annually by more than the total U.S. investment in Canada between Confederation and 1946.

The U.S. hold is so firm, and so fixed, that it is no longer necessary for Americans to send dollars over the border; local profits provide the growth capital. Or, as the FIRA journal puts it, "In recent years, retained earnings of subsidiaries have been the principal source of additions to foreign direct investment in this country."

In the decades since the Gordon Report first sounded its timid tocsin, there have been a whole raft of studies, commissions and dire warnings — the Watkins Report, the Gray Report, the Wahn report and a dozen private projects — all saying substantially the same thing, that if U.S. control continued to grow apace, this nation would be in deep trouble.

The FIRA journal, in an historical review by economist Joan Gherson, makes it clear that U.S. control has continued to grow apace. Gherson's article shows that, not surprisingly, American ownership is concentrated in the largest, most profitable Canadian firms: "American-controlled companies tend to be among the largest in a great many industries in Canada and are, therefore, not only particularly notable but also especially profitable and influential."

For example, she notes that in 1977 U.S. firms "generated nearly 60 per cent of corporation profits in manufacturing and mining."

Other portents, equally startling, bob up in other articles in the FIRA journal. After all the years of concern and cubic yards of reports on the danger of foreign control of our resource sector, the Canadian grip on petroleum and coal products has been pushed all the way from four per cent to eight per cent in the period 1970-77. At the new rate, it should take a mere half-century to get to the 50 per cent of Canadian control currently envisioned in government policy.

This nation owns six per cent of its own rubber products industry, 31 per cent of electrical manufacturing, 32 per cent of chemicals and 49 per cent of mining. We hold 92 per cent of agriculture, forestry and fishing — the dig, hew and haul sector — and zero per cent of tobacco products — the manufacturing end.

Actually, the FIRA figures greatly understate foreign control. Only firms in which 50 per cent or more of the equity is held abroad come under scrutiny, and it is possible, indeed normal, to control large corporations with less than half their shares. What is more, only the book value, the figure that appears in company reports, is calculated, and in most cases, the real value is far higher.

Mel Hurtig, the Edmonton nationalist publisher, reckons U.S. assets in Canada at "well over $100 billion." One result is that it is now axiomatic that the Canadian and American economies react as one. Our dollar tracks the U.S. dollar, our interest rates track the Federal Reserve rediscount rate, and any variation is regarded as abnormal. What the Gordon Commission worried about in 1957 is fact today.

But the nationalist fervor that marked the late 1960s and early '70s — and led, among other things, to the establishment of FIRA — now seems as dated as the hula-hoop.

The current issue of the FIRA journal, with its signs and portents, had it been produced in 1968, would have had the nationalist bands out hurling thunderbolts, or back in the library feverishly checking Thesaurus for synomyms for "colonialism," "spinelessness" and "doom". In today's climate, it has not produced a murmur.

Hurtig has become discouraged. Max Saltsman, Chairman of the Committee for an Independent Canada, has other things on his mind (such as an abiding dream that Canada will annex the Turks and Caicos islands). Walter Gordon, while still engaged in the nationalist debate, has dropped out of the CIC and is working instead with the Canadian Institute for Economic Policy. The CIEP puts out booklets full of worthy sentiments, which do not make the blood race.

There are a number of reasons for the lack of concern about a subject that once had Canadians hopping onto rostrums with fists balled and statistics at the ready.

Outside control is not, apparently, as damaging as expected. Although it is clear that foreign subsidiaries here do not pursue exports aggressively (in high-research industries, U.S. firms control 61 per cent of all sales but only 31 per cent of exports — clearly they are leaving markets abroad to their parent companies), Canadians obviously feel that the contributions of American capital to such areas as electrical manufacturing and oil exploration offset this disadvantage.

Canada has been so busy of late with its own internal squabbles that we have had neither the time nor the energy to address the foreign control issue. Indeed, for some parts of Canada (Alberta comes to mind), "foreign control" refers to other parts of Canada (Ontario comes to mind).

Finally, the control debate has been going on so long that it has become tedious. It's not like a war, earthquake or forest fire, something that arrives with primal force and produces a short, fervent burst of reaction; this is a matter of charts and tables and long-winded speeches. To carry on the battle requires the fervor of a fanatic, the patience of a saint, the concentration of an accountant and the endurance of a mule. There are not many takers.

We have either grown up, or given up.

The boardroom breeds

Katharine Whitehorn

LONDON — Have you just joined the PTA? Or been told you can turn up to monthly sales meetings? Or even — oh wonder — joined the board? If so, you may think all you have to do is read the material they send you, arrive looking eager and say what you think.

Not so. Nine-tenths of the time you will be manoeuvred into one or other of the standard roles played at all meetings; and if they differ in detail from country to country, there are still some types that are universal.

THE OWL, for example, specializes in saying nothing. He nods. He looks meaningfully over his spectacles. He gives the impression of great thought, and everyone thinks he is very wise. Maybe. Who knows? He did open his mouth way back in the spring of 1970, and everyone thought him a fool; he hasn't risked it since.

THE PLANE-CATCHER can never make the drinks before the meeting, always looks anxiously at his watch and can never follow anything up, because he's on his way to his next assignment. He is constantly called away by telephone calls, preferably from Tokyo or Kuwait, thus showing that his time is money — or at any rate very badly organized.

THE WHISPERER even nowadays is a woman: too conditioned to a supportive role to speak out loud, she can't contain herself either; so she mutters to the person next to her, who then misses what everyone else is trying to say.

THE JOKER often knows nothing much about the matter in hand and quickly grows bored. If he makes one crack which has everybody laughing, he sits back, well content to have made his contribution. Useful as a tension-breaker, he can also distract attention at a crucial moment of decision, often disastrously.

THE FORMALIST. I am not too sure if you have him in other countries, but in Britain he's a speciality: the man who can be vilely rude while preserving the exquisite niceties of form. "If I may say so with great respect, that is the most crack-brained idea that even an economist . . . " He also punctiliously, addresses his remarks "through the Chair", which to me suggests sagging basket-work on a rotting Tennessee Williams terrace.

RIP VAN WINKLE is the chairman's aunt, the retired headmaster, the old buffer who can still be suckered for half the funds. He sleeps peacefully for most of the time, sometimes waking to make a forceful point — about the subject that was under discussion 20 minutes back.

THE REPRESENTATIVE is there because you have to have a woman, or a black, or a Republican or someone from Education; he insists on looking at every question from just the one point of view. (I've even heard a man in an otherwise all-woman group begin every sentence "As a man . . . "). A variation is the IDEALIST, who sees some link with the oppressed, the poor, the underdog even if you're only discussing the date of the next meeting. At least, this year he does. Next year he'll be back in advertising.

And lastly there's THE DAMPER, the man who has mastered the great fact of all committees: to let everyone else blow themselves out before you make your own point. Then he will come up with some excellent reason why the bright idea the rest have been trying to crystallize won't work; he doesn't have to suggest anything better himself.

Managing directors manipulating their boards rely greatly on this character for the highly necessary purpose of proceeding without a break from "it's too early to come to a decision" to "it's too late to change anything now."

This technique makes certain that the board, the committee or the caucus never actually decide anything at all; everything is settled quietly in a private office after the whole show is over.

Beer boycott urged, with one exception

price too high

British Columbians should stop drinking beer until the provincial government justifies the high price, NDP MLA Alex Macdonald suggested semi-seriously Tuesday.

Back in January, 1977, a case of beer cost $3.47 including tax but not including the 60-cent bottle deposit.

Since then there have been six increases and now a dozen beer costs $5.30 including tax.

That is an increase to the consumer of 52.7 per cent in little more than three years — far more than the cost-of-living increase for the same period, Macdonald said.

"Every time the breweries cough, their customers get a pain in the exchequer," he said.

"People should boycott beer until the government scrutinizes these increases and makes sure they are justified," he suggested with a smile.

While he has no personal interest in beer — "I only use it as a chaser" — Macdonald said he would not take part in any boycott himself.

The reason: "The only way I can keep track of these rapid increases in price is by dropping in occasionally and picking up a dozen."

B.C. Tel job loss hurts towns

VANCOUVER (CP) — City councils and residents of Interior and northern B.C. towns are protesting B.C. Telephone's multi-million dollar modernization program designed to replace telephone operators with a centralized computer system.

Aldermen and chamber of commerce representatives from Cranbrook, Dawson Creek, Nelson, Vernon, Terrace and Williams Lake say conversion from mechanical switches to centralized computers in five major cities is taking millions of dollars out of local economies and putting an estimated 850 people out of work.

Penticton has already lost 70 operators; Vernon, 75.

The Telecommunications Workers Union says Terrace will lose 80 jobs, Williams Lake, 50; Kamloops, 100; Campbell River, 112 and Nanaimo, 147.

Citizens in Dawson Creek and Cranbrook where a total of 180 operators could lose their jobs over the next two years are demanding that the Canadian Radio-Television and Telecommunications Commission hold public hearings before any action is taken.

B.C. Tel officials and union officials disagree on how many jobs will be eliminated by the program, estimated to cost $30 million a year for at least seven years.

B.C. Tel said in its commission application approximately 30 per cent fewer operator positions are required under the computer-based system. Union officials say more than 50 per cent of B.C.'s 1,700 operators will lose their jobs.

Many will have to choose between unemployment or relocation.

Chamber of commerce representatives say job-finding programs aren't working.

"We have had very little success in finding alternative jobs in the area," said Ross Axworthy, general manager of the Penticton chamber of commerce, the first city to be hit by the program. Axworthy estimates that the Okanagan city lost between $4 and $5 million a year in revenue and taxes when B.C. Tel centralized its operator service in Kelowna.

Another concern among citizens and union members is the "depersonalization" of a computer system. Operators, once known for their loyalty to their hometowns will be located hundreds of miles away from the caller.

"For emergency situations, the computer system is a disaster," says Cranbrook telephone worker, Linda Fisher.

Union officials say its 10,000 members will be instigating some sort of internal action within five days in order to protest the threat to members' jobs and the lack of progress after more than five months of negotiations.

Coal rail spur agreement near

Industry Minister Don Phillips says he is confident the federal government and Canadian National Railways can agree on financing this week to allow the CNR to build a line into coalfields in northeastern B.C.

The B.C. government agreed two weeks ago to drop its demand for more than the $70 million that Ottawa offered to help the B.C. Railway construct the line.

"Let's say that B.C. is giving Ottawa a chance to get off the hook — we're making it easy for them to participate," Phillips said in an interview Tuesday. "They want the coal deal to go ahead, we want the coal deal to go ahead."

He said the federal government is afraid it may set a precedent by committing a lot of money to the project.

"So we've said let the national railway do it — it's the responsibility of the national railway (to open northern Canada to development) as it has been historically."

He said that the line is to meet the CNR main line at Prince George in central B.C. to take the coal to the port at Prince Rupert.

"If the CNR is operating that spur line instead of B.C. Rail it won't mean changing crews at Prince George and various other problems."

Phillips said he thinks the CNR could recover the estimated $215 million cost of constructing the line by levying freight charges on coal companies using the line.

And he rejected statements that B.C. might be letting the CNR build the line because it is worried there could be massive cost overruns.

"There have been all kinds of rail studies in the four years we've been working on northeast coal and the federal government certainly knows how much it's going to cost."

Phillips said he hoped an agreement could be reached on the rail line before Monday, when B.C. coal company executives are to go to Japan for discussions with Japanese steel industry officials.

Compensation Catch-22?

Cutbacks in Workers' Compensation Board services reached a new low when the board refused to compensate a worker for WCB-induced injuries, NDP MLA Karen Sanford complained Tuesday.

An Alcan employee in Kitimat was refused compensation after he sustained an injury while participating in a WCB health study at the board's request, she said.

The claim was rejected because the worker had volunteered.

Ferry position abused: NDP

Two opposition MLAs say a director of the B.C. Ferry Corp. abused his position and must resign because he was the campaign manager for a Social Credit candidate in last year's provincial election.

Lorne Nicolson (NDP — Nelson-Creston) and Don Lockstead (NDP — Mackenzie) said ferry director Ken Sorko gave his candidate, Gerry Gray, secret ferry corporation information which Gray attempted to use for political gain.

Gray, a MacMillan Bloedel Ltd. lab technician in Powell River, ran against Lockstead in last May's election, but lost.

The call for Sorko's resignation from the corporation board followed a meeting Tuesday of the legislature's Crown corporations reporting committee.

Outside the meeting, Lockstead said Gray announced about two weeks before voting day that the ferry service would put a second vessel, the Pender Queen, on the run between Horseshoe Bay in West Vancouver and the Sechelt Penninsula, a popular tourist destination.

"He made the announcement about two weeks before the official ferry service public release and it was a dirty political trick," said Lockstead.

"Residents of the Sunshine coast wanted better service and I had been trying to get it for them for two years.

"My information is that the decision on the Pender Queen was a political decision designed to help Gray."

"Sorko, as a director, is supposed to represent all taxpayers of the province regardless of their politics," said Lockstead. "In my opinion he was in a conflict of interest position when he served as a Socred campaign manager and should resign."

Sorko denied he abused his position as a director and said he will not resign.

"I don't see anything wrong with what I did. I wasn't in any conflict. I am entitled to my political views and I can still represent all the people of B.C."

Asked where Gray got his information Sorko said, "I don't know. Not from me."

He said the decision to put the Pender Queen on the run was made by management, not the board of directors.

Gray said he couldn't even remember making the Pender Queen announcement.

Stretching ferries cheaper: Fraser

The B.C. Ferry Corp. could save a colossal amount of money by increasing the capacity of its seven stretch vessels instead of purchasing new vessels, Transportation Minister Alex Fraser said Tuesday.

Fraser said it would be cheaper to stretch the vessels to C-class size than to purchase more of the so-called jumbo ferries which cost between $30 million and $35 million each.

C-class size vessels, similar to the Queen of Cowichan which operates between Horseshoe and Departure Bays, can accommodate 310 vehicles compared with 190 on the present ferries.

The corporation now has two C-class vessels in its 24-vessel fleet and is scheduled to have two more jumbo ferries running by 1981.

At a meeting of the legislature's Crown corporations committee four weeks ago, B.C. Ferries general manager Charles Gallagher said the corporation needed at least 11 new C-class ferries on the Tsawwassen-Swartz Bay and Horseshoe Bay-Departure Bay routes between the mainland and Vancouver Island to meet increased traffic demand.

However, Fraser told the committee Tuesday that the vessels might not have to be built because it may be possible to stretch the current vessels for approximately $10 million each.

"If that can be done engineer-wise, we're going to save a colossal amount of money," he said.

Fraser, who also is chairman of the corporation's board of directors, said B.C. Ferries is considering placing a truck ferry on the Horseshoe Bay-Departure Bay routee.

The upgrading of the highway from Sayward to Port Hardy on northern Vancouver Island has resulted in a significant increase in commercial truck traffic on that route, he said.

The minister also suggested that the fare charged on the truck ferry operating between Tsawwassen and Swartz Bay be raised to $1.40 a foot from $1.10 a foot to allow the corporation to recover costs and reduce its dependence on the provincial government subsidy.

He said companies shipping goods across Georgia Strait are getting super service at low rates and he wondered whether they were passing the savings on to the consumer.

Fraser, who was grilled for two hours by committee members on a wide range of ferry matters, also indicated that the corporation is going to have another look at instituting some type of reservation system on the two southern routes.

"A full reservation system likely would be unworkable," he said, "but we could have a partial system to look after long weekends. That's where our greatest problems are."

Fraser also said the corporation is reviewing its northern transportation routes with plans to get service into more remote communities.

And he said corporation officials will be meeting with Eurocan Pulp Co. officials in Kitimat to discuss rebuilding of the company's pier, destroyed by fire several weeks ago, with the possibility of adding ferry docking facilities.

Queen of North ready for sailing

The B.C. Ferry Corporation's Queen of the North — the former Queen of Surrey which went back into Burrard dry dock for a supplementary refit — is due at the Tsawwassen ferry terminal at midnight tonight.

B.C. Ferries spokesman Bill Bouchard said today she will sail for her north-coast run at 6 p.m. on Thursday.

Bouchard said a renaming ceremony will take place at Prince Rupert on Saturday morning.

George Baldwin, chief of operations for B.C. Ferries, and the Workmen's Compensation Board has checked out complaints about high noise levels in some of the crew's cabins and found only five cabins are involved.

Bouchard said, if necessary, five other cabins will be made available.

B.C. rescue aircraft can't land on water: pilot

VANCOUVER (CP) — The search and rescue squadron covering the B.C. coast has no aircraft capable of landing on water, the Dubin commission on aviation safety was told Tuesday.

Pilot Brick Betsworth, who flies out of Campbell River for Island Air, said he saw a Beaver aircraft that had crashed in the water last summer, 65 kilometres from the squadron's base at Comox, but it was more than an hour before search and rescue could get anybody there.

"The result was that the pilot of the Beaver was dead" Betsworth said. "He had his lifejacket on so I imagine he survived the crash."

Betsworth, the first B.C. small plane commercial pilot to testify before the commission, outlined other practical problems faced on the coast.

In an area where weather conditions can change rapidly and vary widely in adjacent areas, the department of transport has closed one of the three weather reporting stations on the west coast of Vancouver Island, he said.

This means that pilots often have to make a 30-minute flight to find out for themselves the weather conditions at their destination.

Gulf Air pilot Mike Thompson, also of Campbell River, said that hours can be extremely long in summer, with 12-hour working days not uncommon. And while on duty, he said, pilots must load and unload freight as well as fly the aircraft.

He said he has flown when he has felt too tired and said he and other pilots have been told by management that refusing to fly because of fatigue is grounds for dismissal.

Captain Charles MacWilliam, a Toronto-based Air Canada 727 pilot also qualified on 747s, said he examined the operations of three small B.C. air carriers for the commission.

He said there are no department of transport guidelines limiting the hours that can be worked by the pilots of planes up to the size of the Twin Otter and operating under visual flight rules.

He said this is a particular problem on Vancouver Island where flight legs average 20 minutes and the pilots do not have a chance to relax before taking off again.

"A pilot could do 15-20 take-offs and landings in one duty period," he said.

Also Tuesday, a Kelowna man operating a flight school denied that he was running his business illegally following charges heard by the commission.

Craig Thompson, owner of Kelowna Custom Air, said he bought the school "a week and a half ago" from a company called Kelowna Funseekers Ltd., and is using that company's licence and operating certificate.

The hearing was told licences and certificates cannot be sold, making the present operation illegal. Thompson said he is using the former company's documents under "a management contract."

Donn Richardson, a Transport Canada official, told the hearing that he has no power to seek an injunction ordering the school to stop operating.

And Cecil Sampert, Canadian Transport Committee examiner, said it usually takes about two months to get a cease and desist order from his Ottawa headquarters.

Chief commission counsel John Sopinka said there might be some embarrassment to the department of transport if a student is killed as the result of the operation of an illegal flying school.

The hearings in Vancouver continue today.

Logger sounds alarm on policy

KELOWNA (CP) — The misguided and potentially dangerous policies being pursued by the B.C. government have seriously jeopardized the future of the province's forests, says Kelowna logger Peter Griffiths.

Griffiths, of the newly-formed British Columbians For Responsible Forest Policy, said that since problems affecting the forest resource base are reaching crisis proportions, it is essential that British Columbians understand the available options.

"The longer present policies are allowed to go unchallenged, the more severe the long-term repercussions will be," he said in a interview today.

Recently-released yield analysis reports contain projections of drastic declines in the supply of forest resources in many regions, he said.

Griffiths said the forest ministry should immediately implement a widespread reforestation program.

Tel layoff 'threats' stir union reaction

B.C. Telephone Co.'s threat of employee layoffs to offset the refusal of a rate increase has stirred up rumblings of job action from the union.

Bob Donnelly charged in Vancouver Tuesday that the company's threat was aimed at intimidating union negotiators during current contract talks.

He said the employees may react with action of their own but a union official said today no definite policy has been set yet.

The verbal potshots began Monday when B.C. Tel chairman Gordon MacFarlane said it would be difficult to avoid layoffs and service cuts as a result of the refusal by the Canadian Radio-television and Telecommunications Commission to grant a requested 5.3-per-cent interim rate increase.

Donnelly said it was ludicrous for a company whose earnings hit record levels last year to be pleading poverty.

The management-union exchange is the latest indication that current negotiations for a new contract may be heating up.

Talks began eight months ago and a federal conciliation officer is assisting the parties. The contract for the 10,000 TWU members expired Dec. 31, 1979.

CHANGE YOUR CAT LITTER.

The water test shows how Litter Fresh™ expands.

NEW LITTER FRESH STAYS FRESHER LONGER THAN CLAY LITTER BECAUSE IT IS MORE THAN TWICE AS ABSORBENT.

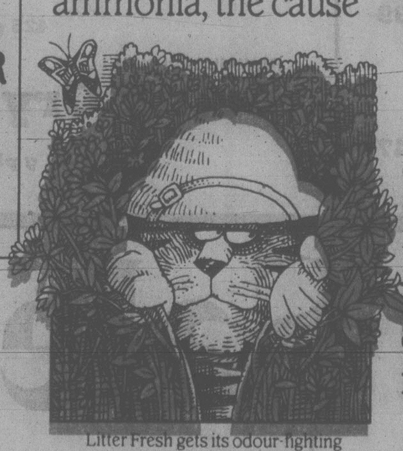
Litter Fresh is not lumps of dirt. It is tiny organic pellets that absorb like a blotter.

Clay just gets wet. Litter Fresh expands. It soaks up more than twice the moisture that clay does. So Litter Fresh stays fresher longer.

Because it stays fresher longer, you may decide to use less cat litter, or, you may decide to use the same amount and change it less often.

LITTER FRESH CONTAINS CHLOROPHYLL. NATURE'S OWN ODOUR FIGHTER.

Chlorophyll is a natural deodorizer. It actually fights ammonia, the cause of cat box odours. So, new Litter Fresh gives you super odour control. It's nicer for you, your cat and your guests.



Litter Fresh gets its odour-fighting chlorophyll from alfalfa.

LITTER FRESH IS DUST FREE.

Clay litter is dirt so of course there is dust. Dust when you put it in. Dust when the cat tracks it out.

Litter Fresh comes in tiny, dust-free pellets.

Litter Fresh is such a refreshing change.

Quebec will attend constitutional talks

QUEBEC (CP) — Premier Rene Levesque says he will attend a June 9 constitutional conference called by Prime Minister Trudeau.

Levesque told reporters today that he had yet to see an invitation from Trudeau, but "if we've got it, there's no reason not to be there." (See earlier story on page 42).

While the meeting is supposed to be held in camera, Levesque repeated the pledge he made last week that "as far as we're concerned, there won't be any closed doors."

Constitutional bargaining sessions may be closed, he said, but the Quebec government will spill the beans so the public is kept abreast of all developments.

Levesque also repeated, in the wake of Trudeau's promises during the Quebec referendum campaign, that it is up to the prime minister to come up with proposals for "substantial" constitutional change.

Levesque spoke to reporters as he arrived at his office for a regular cabinet meeting. The cabinet is to hold a special meeting this weekend at Pointe-au-Pic, Que., preparing for the Tuesday resumption of the national assembly.

today's markets

Toronto

The Toronto stock market was sharply lower in active mid-afternoon trading today.

The Toronto Stock Exchange said trading was halted at the opening in shares of Crush International Ltd. pending an announcement. The stock last traded at $14½.

Crush said it will consider an offer by Dr. Pepper to purchase the company's U.S. and international assets for $51 million. Procter and Gamble earlier offered $46 million for the same assets.

Trading was also halted in shares of Canadian Natural Resources Ltd. pending an announcement. The stock last traded at $19.

Trading in shares of Bramalea Ltd. resumed at the opening following a halt Tuesday and by 2 p.m. the stock fell 1¼ to $21½.

The company's directors have proposed a two-for-one stock split and intend to resume payment of dividends for the first time since 1970 on a twice-yearly basis.

Trading in shares of Scurry-Rainbow Oil Ltd. also resumed after a halt Tuesday and by 2 p.m. the stock jumped $11 to $105.

Home Oil Co. Ltd., the energy division of Hiram Walker-Consumers Home Ltd., has proposed to buy the remaining shares of Scurry-Rainbow for $107 a share. The company now owns 88.5 per cent of the shares.

The TSE said subdivided shares of the par value $1 in the capital stock of Shell Oil Co. will be posted for trading at the opening June 2, replacing currently listed shares. Shareholders approved a two-for-one share split at the annual meeting April 24.

New York

The stock market edged lower today, ending a rally that had boosted stock prices to their highest level since February.

More banks, including Chemical Bank, lowered their prime lending rates to 14 per cent, but the labor department provided bad news by announcing that productivity in private business fell at an annual rate of 0.7 per cent in the first three months of the year.

Oil and rail stocks, which had helped to pace the rally, gave up some of their gains in active trading. Exxon Corp. was off ⅜ at $64⅞, although Standard Oil of California gained ½ to $73½ after falling ¼ in early trading. Among rail stocks, Burlington Northern slipped ⅜ to $68.

London

The London stock market was mixed near the close of quiet trading today.

The Financial Times index fell three points to 417.0.

Golds advanced while equities eased.

Canadian stocks moved higher.

U.S. steel output plummets

PITTSBURGH (AP) — The weekly U.S. output of steel fell to the lowest level in five years as slumping demand for autos, appliances and other consumer goods further cut back orders at the mills.

Housing starts rise in April

OTTAWA (CP) — Housing starts increased slightly in April over March, reflecting attempts by some builders to beat the last round of interest-rate increases, Statistics Canada has reported.

The seasonally-adjusted annual rate of all types of housing starts in April was 163,400, compared with 151,200 a month earlier.

The April increase was caused by builders who took out mortgages just as interest rates began to increase, a Statistics Canada spokesman said. There is about a two-month lag between loan approvals and taking out building permits to begin construction.

Housing starts are expected to drop dramatically to an annual rate of about 135,000 in May and June as the damper of high mortgage interest rates works through the system, the spokesman said.

Cattle

CALGARY (CP) — Receipts to 11 a.m. today at the Calgary public stockyards totalled 700 cattle and calves consisting mainly of slaughter steers and cows with a light run of slaughter heifers.

Trade was strong and active on steers and heifers and moderate on cows to local and out-of-province buyers. Slaughter steers gained 50 cents while slaughter heifers gained 25 cents with sales to $69.40. Slaughter cows remained barely steady while good bulls remined fully steady to 25 cents higher.

A1-2 steers over 1,000 lbs. $70-$72.60; A1-2 under 1,000 lbs. 70-72.40. A1-2 heifers over 850 lbs. 57-69. D1-2 cows 44-47; D3-5 40-45. Good bulls 55-60.25.

There were too few feeder cattle to quote prices.

Was John gassed by the city?

Carbon monoxide poisoning is real, say the doctors. But try telling the WCB that!

By BRENDA DALGLISH

John Graham, a former mechanic with the Victoria city police department, believes his job turned him into a carbon monoxide victim.

All he has to do now is convince the Workers' Compensation Board.

Graham, 50, has been fighting his case — so far with little success — for a 18 months.

He worked as the police department's only mechanic for four years, beginning in December 1974.

The department's tiny garage in the rear of a parkade beside the police offices on Fisgard Street had insufficient ventilation, says Graham.

At certain times, when winds or atmospheric conditions were particularly bad, says Graham, the air in the garage would turn blue from the exhaust of cars in the police garage and adjoining public parkade.

Traditional medical theory is that carbon monoxide poisoning occurs only when a large amount of the gas is inhaled.

Doctors believed that this either resulted in death, if the amount was sufficiently large, or in some type of temporary reaction that had no long-term effect on the victim.

Only now is carbon monoxide poisoning caused by long-term exposure beginning to be recognized as a health threat, according to legal adviser Ron Rappin.

But Rappin, who's handling Graham's case among other WCB cases for the Law Centre, says doctors in Europe and the U.S. have recently been learning about a long-term type of poisoning whose effects gradually accumulate in people who are exposed to high but non-lethal levels of the gas over a long time.

Graham wasn't the only one who knew of the ventilation problem.

At one time court was held in the building beside the parkade and the ventilation system was right beside the police garage.

On occasion, judges would close the courts because the air circulating in the building smelled so heavily of exhaust fumes.

In July, 1978, Graham blacked out while working in the garage.

He'd complained about conditions in the garage several times but no improvements were ever made until after he was overcome.

Before his blackout Graham said he suffered from symptoms which included headaches, general aches and pains, exhaustion and some mental confusion and forgetfulness.

He says he's now learned these symptoms are indications of long-term carbon monoxide poisoning.

Rappin has medical studies which indicate neurological damage can occur from long exposure.

Unfortunately, says Rappin, it's very difficult to prove that type of damage.

Blood tests taken immediately after severe symptoms are displayed are one of the more reliable indications that damage might have occurred.

But because the condition is uncommon, Graham wasn't tested for carbon monoxide levels in his blood until several weeks after the most severe incident.

Although Graham tried to resume working he continued to suffer severe side effects until his doctor told him not to return to the garage.

In December, 1978, the police department informed him he would be replaced by another mechanic.

Graham applied to the WCB for coverage, claiming his illness was job-related but was turned down.

In July, 1979, the board of review for WCB listened to his appeal of the ruling.

Graham is still waiting for its decision.

Rappin says this type of delay is not unusual in cases which involve new medical information.

But that doesn't console Graham who's now working as a commissionaire because his doctor has told him he can't return to work around exhaust fumes.

Graham feels he's been abandoned by the police department which he says never made any attempt to correct the ventilation problems in the garage before he became ill.

He also resents the fact the department wasn't prepared to tell the WCB when it investigated how bad ventilation conditions in the garage were.

He's also unhappy with the WCB.

First because it never inspected the garage until after he'd filed his claim and the department had made changes to the ventilation system, and secondly, because it's been reluctant to accept his medical arguments.

And what does Graham want to get out of the long battle?

Mainly, he says, he'd like two things. First he'd like an acknowledgment from WCB and the police department that he is suffering from a job-related illness brought on by poor working conditions.

And secondly, he'd like Victoria, which was his actual employer when he worked with the police department, to give him a job in some other department.

Since Graham first spoke with the Times, he put his case to Mayor Bill Tindall, who's promised to put his name at the top of the list for the next suitable job with the city.

"I just want what's fair," Graham says.

John Graham . . . 18-month fight

FOX
. . . little hope

Secretary of State Francis Fox came to Victoria Tuesday and offered little hope of improved financial aid to the area's cultural organizations.

Fox skirted the issue of aid to orchestras and theatres across the country, many in deep trouble, they say, because of the federal government's failure to adjust grants to match inflation over the past four years.

Victoria faces were glum when Fox said he doubts the federal government should be involved in financing arts organizations except for those with national impact.

The Association of Canadian Symphony Orchestras is urging the federal government to wipe out the deficits of the leading orchestras through the use of lotteries fund cash.

But Fox was non-committal, saying that any such decision would have to be worked out under an agreement with the provinces.

He also disclaimed federal responsiblity for the fact that Victoria is the last capital city in Canada without an arts centre.

"That's a matter for provincial government priorities," he replied.

"The impetus has to begin with the province's own concern for its capital city."

The minister said most of the issues raised during the meeting will come under consideration once a committee set up by the Canadian Radio-television and Telecommunications Commission delivered its report at the end of June, he said.

Fox, who also holds the federal communications portfolio, was in Victoria for a meeting with Communications Minister Pat McGeer after speaking to the Canadian Cable Television Association convention in Vancouver.

Fox told delegates there he is sympathetic with cable operators' frustrations with the delay in allowing introduction of pay television.

He also commented on the need for the system to produce a large quantity of quality Canadian programming in consideration of the amount of Canadian artistic talent.

"The problem is finding the money to pay for these programs," he said.

Fox promised cable television operators on Tuesday that there will be swift action on pay television.

The minister said he is aware of cable operators' frustration with government delay in allowing introduction of pay television, in reaching decisions on satellite broadcasting and extension of television services to poorly-served remote regions.

The cable industry has been pressing since 1972 for pay television, a system offering first-run movies and entertainment specials.

The system is rapidly developing in the U.S. and the U.S. programs now are available in Canada off American satellites.

Mark down May on gloom chart

If you think there's been a distinct dearth of sunshine this month, you're right.

Victoria weatherman Norm Dressler today confirmed that May has been one of the gloomiest on record, though not the dullest.

That unenviable honor goes to May, 1915, when the sun shone for only 180½ hours. That was a lot less sunshine than Victoria got in May, 1963, when the sun shone for a record 365.4 hours.

Up until Tuesday, the sunhine hours for Victoria came to only 193.5 hours.

But Dressler sees brighter things.

"I think we're going to get back into the sun," he said.

50-75 more beds for peninsula

Extended care doubled

By BRENDA DALGLISH

Saanich Peninsula Hospital has been given permission to double its extended care beds.

Hospital administrator John Stevens said Tuesday the B.C. ministry of health has approved the hospital's request to add 50 beds plus space for 25 more that will be needed in the next few years.

The Mount Newton Crossroad hospital has 75 extended care beds which are all full.

Several months ago the ministry announced the hospital could add 25 new beds but directors presented a counter-proposal saying those beds would be quickly filled and asked for more.

"Ideally the first 50 beds won't be completely filled up by the end of 1981 - we'll have a few beds left over to take people that come to us after that," said Stevens.

Space for the remaining 25 beds will be completed to shell form, said the administrator, and will be brought on line when the other beds are filled and a waiting list develops again.

"Hopefully we'll be able to take all the peninsula residents who would like to come here and maybe a few from Victoria," he said.

Kitchen and cafeteria space will have to be enlarged to handle the additional beds, he said.

Meanwhile, The Priory hospital on Goldstream in Langford will reopen its old building June 9 to supply 40 additional extended care beds.

The Juan de Fuca Hospital Society has been renovating and upgrading the building since the ministry announced the plan several months ago.

Charles Jackson, president of the society, said those beds will be filled by patients now occupying beds in acute care hospitals.

Check asked on mask stock

Ald. Robin Blencoe wants Victoria to be prepared in the event Mount St. Helens blows again.

While he doesn't want to alarm anyone, Blencoe is concerned that if the winds blow towards Victoria after the next eruption, the situation could be serious.

"I'm particularly worried about the many elderly people in Victoria who may have respiratory problems," Blencoe said.

"I want to know if we can get enough surgical masks if we need them."

Some city drug stores have already reported they're sold out of surgical masks and the supply is being affected by the heavy demand for masks in the U.S. northwest.

Blencoe, chairman of city council's emergency planning committee, has asked assistant city engineer Bill Jorgenson for a report on what steps might have to be taken if there's a heavy dust or ash fallout on the city.

Blencoe conceded that his attitude might alarm some people but believes this can't be helped.

"We should prepared. To do nothing would be wrong," he said.

One young Victoria entrepreneur who was ready at the right moment was Andre Heimlich of 2920 Cook.

When the volcano blew, Heimlich hot-footed it down south and came back with about 200 pounds of volcanic ash and dust scraped off the side of a Cascades mountain.

He didn't have any trouble getting through customs either.

"I think they were glad to get rid of it," he said.

Heimlich prepared a brochure with a brief history of the volcano and some facts about volcanic ash.

Then he popped the brochures and bits of dust into plastic bags and went around to city newsstands and stores.

Sales of his little bags of ash — 50 cents and $1 — are about to pass the 1,000 mark and they'll soon be going on sale in Nanaimo and Vancouver.

Heimlich works part-time at Eaton's and describes himself as a free enterpriser.

What if somebody decides to copy his scheme?

"The police have blocked a lot of the roads down there," Heimlich said. "I used I-5 and it's blocked."

So for now, Heimlich has the genuine Mount St. Helens dust market in Victoria and lower Vancouver Island in the bag.

Tenants flee fire

Tenants of the 33-suite Spring Ridge Apartment at 2136 Ridge Road fled the building after a fire broke out shortly after 2 a.m. today.

Firemen quickly doused the blaze which was confined to a storage room in the basement of the three-storey wood-frame building, but remained at the scene for nearly two hours as a precaution against flare-ups.

Deputy fire chief Mike Heppell said about $8,000 worth of tenants' personal effects stored in the room were destroyed.

Cause of the fire has not yet been determined.

Top law grad going to Supreme Court job

University of Victoria law student Robert Vick Farley graduates at the top of his class Saturday, then leaves for Ottawa to become clerk to former Victorian Mr. Justice William McIntyre of the Supreme Court of Canada.

Farley is a former counsellor with the Drug and Alcohol Rehabilitation Society here and child care counsellor in Ottawa who enrolled at UVic in 1977 and achieved the highest aggregate standing in law among the 63 members of his graduating class.

He will receive the B.C. Law Society's gold medal and prize at the society annual meeting at Harrison Hot Springs June 4-6.

A native of Fort Smith, Ark., Farley has lived in Canada nearly a decade and is now a citizen. He said entering law was based partly on his counselling experience, especially dealing with adolescents before the courts because of drug and alcohol abuse.

FARLEY
. . . clerkship

He has been a member of UVic senate, curriculum committee and Law Student Society executive; research assistant in constitutional, medical-legal and criminal law for faculty members, and researcher for the attorney-general's administration.

In each of his three years at UVic, Farley made first-class standing and won a number of undergraduate scholarships and prizes.

Tourist fallout from volcano

By AL FORREST

An erupting volcano is no tourist attraction — in fact it is more likely to scare them away.

But Seattle is expecting a banner tourist season this summer because of Mount St. Helens and Victoria should gets its share.

"There won't be many visitors going into eastern Washington this year because of the ash problem," says Hartly Kruger, executive vice-president of Seattle's tourist and convention bureau.

"The early indications are that motorists will be staying with the coastal cities like Seattle, Victoria and Vancouver.

"We haven't had any cancellations that I know of because of the volcano and I don't expect any."

If anything business should increase, he said, because travellers will avoid areas where the ash is falling.

Mount St. Helens is near the southern border of the state and is closer to Portland than Seattle.

"The number of day visitors to Victoria should increase, especially if the jetfoil proves popular. I rode on it to Victoria last week and it was a splendid trip. It seemed to be about 80 per cent full," said Kruger.

That would be about 200 passengers as it can seat 250.

It is too early to compare the new service with the Marguerite but he said it is a shame the Victoria Princess ferry can carry only 800 passengers. The Marguerite could take 1,800.

With sea travel between Seattle and Victoria cut to two hours (on the jetfoil) there should be more tourist promotions involving both cities, he said.

Kruger said King County was heading for a brisk tourist season before the eruption on May 18.

"Inquiries at the (Seattle) bureau this year were up 38 per cent at the end of April. And we haven't seen any negative results since the eruption."

More people will be traveling by car as gasoline once more will be plentiful.

"We have been assured that fuel supplies will be abundant on the west coast."

(The price, however, will be the Canadian equivalent of about $1.50 per gallon.)

North-south coastal routes will be open, despite the volcano, although there is intermittent concern about possible flooding in the Toutle River, which could affect a bridge on Interstate 5, the main highway south.

"We would be in favor of more co-ordinated effort."

One weak spot detected in the tourist picture is air travel.

"The number of passengers flying to Seattle is down from last year by a small margin."

This coincides with the national picture in the U.S. where air travel is down eight per cent. The number of tourists flying to Hawaii from the U.S. mainland in the first three months was 5.8 per cent below the same period in 1979.

Concerns about the recession have encouraged vacationers to travel closer to home.

Kruger said Seattle's main market is from California, which is close enough for car travel, which will be the favorite mode of transporation now the gas scare is easing.

Skalbania feels 18,000-seat rink not big enough

CALGARY (CP) — City council unanimously endorsed a $55.9-million Olympic hockey coliseum Tuesday. Final approval is expected after the provincial government indicates how much it is prepared to pay, if anything.

Nelson Skalbania, who bought Atlanta Flames and is moving the National Hockey League team to Calgary next season, said the new 18,000-seat arena may be too small.

He suggested the coliseum be built with 22,000 seats — a size Bill Dickie, chairman of Mayor Ross Alger's sports facilities advisory committee, told council may yet be possible.

Skalbania, a Vancouver real estate millionaire, said Calgarians made 20,000 applications for tickets to see next season's NHL games in the 6,400-seat Corral arena.

Russians extend deadline

Times News Services

The Soviet organizers of this summer's Olympic Games in Moscow have extended their entry deadline in an attempt to entice undecided nations away from the American-sponsored boycott, which Moscow claims has been a failure.

The official list, released in Switzerland by the International Olympic Organization, showed that 85 National Olympic Committees have already accepted invitations to compete in Moscow, and only 29 have formally said they will boycott the event to protest the Soviet invasion of Afghanistan.

The IOC figures, based on cables from the Moscow organizers, added that a further 27 countries failed to respond by the May 24 deadline, and that any of these later entries will be given "sympathetic consideration," if they submit acceptances.

The tally, however, differed from figures issued Tuesday by the State Department in Washington, which had only 73 nations apparently attending the games, with 60 backing the boycott and 12 still undecided.

"We do not consider the boycott to be a failure by any means," a State Department spokesman said, urging governments and athletes that have accepted invitations to Moscow to reconsider and join the boycott.

In contrast, vice president of the Soviet Olympic Organizing Committee, Vladimir Popov, said, "The campaign for a boycott, which contradicts all traditions and has been artificially whipped up, has failed and has not even brought the small amount of results that its organizers had hoped for."

Unless there are more acceptances, the Moscow Olympics — with 85 nations going — will be the worst attended of the last three games. Eighty-eight nations took part in the 1976 Games at Montreal, 122 went to Munich, West Germany in 1972 and 113 competed in Mexico in 1968. The 1976 Montreal games were also partly boycotted — by 29 African states over the refusal of New Zealand to cancel a rugby tour of South Africa.

Many of the countries which have accepted invitations to Moscow will be sending incomplete teams to the games in July because some of the sporting federations making up the membership of the national Olympic committees independently voted to join the boycott.

For example, the British Equestrian Federation decided on a boycott although Britain's national Olympic committee voted to reject the boycott call.

Major sports nations rejecting invitations along with the United States were Canada, West Germany, Japan, China, which would have been competing for the first time, and Kenya, whose athletes have dominated recent long and middle-distance races.

Soviet and Western officials in Moscow predict further struggles over participation.

In Stockholm, a former Russian army general, Piotr Grigorenko, told a news conference the one polital weapon the Soviet Union can understand would be to stand firm and show that the West is united against totalitarian regimes.

"The Soviet leaders are very sensitive to world opinion and a united and successful boycott of the Moscow Olympics would in the end make the Russians withdraw their army from Afghanistan," said Grigorenko, now a human rights activist.

Early Soviet predictions of the number of countries that would attend the Games varied between 100 and 130. Soviet officials have remained grimly optimistic about the Games throughout the boycott campaign, vowing confidently that sports cooperation would triumph over "politics."

But a Western diplomat said Tuesday that "one thing you can be sure of is that this battle is going to continue."

"There's a lot of time between now and July 19 (the opening date for the Olympics), and there'll be plenty of pressure from both sides on any country that is undecided."

Will they ask: which Sugar?

NEW YORK — First there was lunch with Ray Miller, the one with the left hook, the hook that knocked out Jimmy McLarnin, who fought 14 years and never had been stopped before and never was stopped again. "But why do they always say that?" Ray said. "It's like I never fought anybody else or knocked out anybody else."

Miller fought out of Chicago and after that he was a referee around New York, and the chances are he knows as much about fights and fighters as anybody around. So how did he see Duran-Leonard? That's Roberto Duran, the remorseless street fighter from Panama City who gave up the lightweight championship of the world to move up one weight division, and Sugar Ray Leonard of Palmer Park, Md., who is welterweight champion of the World Boxing Council's planet. Theirs is the big one June 20 in Montreal.

"As a lightweight," Miller said, "Duran was great. As a welterweight — " he shrugged. Duran has won eight welterweight bouts, four by knockout, yet at 147 pounds he hasn't seemed to Miller to have the same old fire and the bigger guys haven't gone down as readily as they did at 135.

"The other kid," Ray said, "Leonard, he throws a thousand punches. How can you hurt a guy with a paint brush?" He shrugged again. Miller isn't picking anybody.

After lunch the mail brought a note from Angelo Dundee, who trains Leonard. It was typed on the back of a color-coded chart of seating arrangements in Montreal's Stade Olympique.

"No matter the size of the stadium," Angelo wrote, "the ring is but so big, and that's where the action will be. It will be a good one, something on the order of Robinson-Basilio — the second fight, naturally." (First time they met, Carmen Basilio outpointed Ray Robinson for the middleweight title; second time around, Ray punched Carmen's eyes shut and regained the championship but he had to be carried to his dressing room.)

While Miller was snapping veal parmigiano in New York, Leonard was opening his training camp in the Exhibition Room of the Washington Sheraton Northeast Inn in New Carrollton, Md.

He boxed four brisk rounds with his cousin, Odell Leonard, then four with Mike James, an amateur just turning pro. In the fourth round Leonard fetched James a hook in the chitlings and James did an odd thing. Instead of doubling over as a man usually does from a blow to the belly, he went flat on his back.

"They told me to throw right hands," James said a little later, "because Duran throws right hands. I hit him one right, I hit him another right, and on the third he beat me to the punch and knocked the wind out of me."

"I'm more flat-footed now," Leonard said, as though he were replying to Miller's criticism, which he had not heard. However, he has heard critics say he tries to ape Muhammad Ali. "I'm not Ali," he said. "Sure, maybe at the start I was trying to do his shuffle or his rope-a-dope but not now. Against Benitez, that wasn't me."

Leonard won his share of the championship when the referee stopped his match with Wilfred Benitez with six seconds to go last Nov. 30. He was a clear winner but not a flawless winner and Barney Nagler, remembering Sugar Ray Robinson, wrote that Leonard should "give back the name."

"Going for the title," Leonard said, "I was awed. And being a 4-to-1 favorite, that bothered me. I knew it would be a tougher fight than that. That wasn't me at my best."

After the Benitez bout, Leonard knocked out England's Davey Green in the fourth round. "They said I could take him out anytime I wanted," Ray said Tuesday. "So I took him out as soon as I was able. But that time I felt good, I was relaxed, I could do what I wanted to do and I experimented with a few moves. That's how I'm going to fight Duran."

He is an immensely personable young man, with great natural gifts. He has not yet reached his peak and evidently he realizes that for, thinking of Ray Robinson, he has said: "Twenty years from now when they mention Sugar Ray, maybe somebody will ask, 'Which one?' "

LEGION's Ron Jay (29) suffered a concussion on this check by New Westminster Salmonbellies defender in first period of Western Canada Major Junior Lacrosse League game at Esquimalt Sports Centre, Tuesday. Jay missed rest of game won by Esquimalt 18-5. There was no penalty.

Legion breaks out with a vengeance

Esquimalt Legion showed a distinct lack of sympathy toward New Westminster Salmonbellies in a Western Canada Major Junior Lacrosse League game Tuesday at Esquimalt Sports Centre.

And why should they? They were almost as badly off.

Legion, who used three replacements, ended a five-game losing streak by toppling Salmonbellies 18-5 before 347 fans.

Salmonbellies, who share the league lead with Burnaby Cablevision, were missing seven players through injuries and suspensions and coach Dave Wilfong was sitting out a one-game suspension for harrassing officials during a game last Friday in New Westminster. They also used three replacements.

Legion will be even more shorthanded tonight and will have five intermediate players in the lineup when they meet Coquitlam at Coquitlam.

Latest casualty was Ron Jay who suffered a concussion from a check in the first period.

Jim Lightbody and Bruce Alexander each scored four goals to lead the Legion attack and John Crowther added three. Lightbody, who assisted on four goals, and Crowther, who had three assists, now share the league scoring lead with 31 points each.

Gord Taylor, Kelly Bryant and Gord Christiaens added two goals each for Esquimalt and Alton Davis supplied a single.

Earl Wills (2), Terry Oiom, Bruce Cowie and Loyd Simmons replied for New Westminster.

Derek Croucher played an outstanding game in goal for Legion, making 36 saves, while Ron McIsaac and Gary Ruden combined to stop 34 shots on the New Westminster net.

League commissioner Bruno Ohmann of Richmond attended the game and said any suspensions for similar actions would be increased starting June 1 because the league is having difficulty getting referees for games.

"Officials tell me they won't work junior "A" games because of the abuse they take from players and coaches," said Ohmann. "So we'll see if the suspensions have any effect."

He added that any incidents of racial slurs would be dealt with in a similar manner.

Bob Reid, the Legion general manager, told a league governors' meeting last weekend that several Esquimalt players had been subjected to racist remarks.

"All teams have been told I'll take immediate action against players or coaches committing such acts," said Ohmann.

Rocks, Adanacs fighting for lead

It's the battle of the giants in more ways than one in the Western Lacrosse Association game between Victoria Shamrocks and Coquitlam Adanacs tonight at Memorial Arena.

The two clubs tied for the league lead, each with 12 points, which puts first place at stake. Much of the WLA's best firepower will also be on display.

Shamrocks' Kevin Alexander, who had an eight-point night against Vancouver Burrards Tuesday with five goals and three assists in the Rocks' 14-12 victory, is the leading WLA gunner while his clubmate Jim Lynch is right behind.

Alexander now has 30 goals and 26 assists for 56 points while Lynch, who had one goal and seven assists in the Burrards game, now has 21 goals and 28 assists for 49 points.

Rick Baker is the third member of the Shamrock power group. He scored four goals against Burrards for his second four-goal output of the season.

Bill Marechek, Dave Thomson, Art Webster and Jeevan Dillon had singles.

Ron Pinder and Doug Hayes each fired three goals for the Burrards while singles came from Bruce Turris, Mike McMillan, John Swan, Erik Otterstrom, Paul Cioci and Terry Bingley.

Larry Smeltzer made 36 saves in the Victoria net while Brian Celli and Jim Poelzer combined for 23 saves for Vancouver.

Shamrocks picked up 11 minors and one major while Vancouver was whistled for 14 minors.

Tonight it isn't likely the Rock shooters will have things their own way. Coquitlam, which defeated the Irish 12-8 in Coquitlam earlier this season, has a flock of good scorers as well and many of the best.

They include rookie Mike Reelie, who is fourth in the league scoring race with a 17-18 — 35 mark, Dan Wilson 11-15 — 26, Mark Valastin 10-14 — 24, Rico Bellusci 8-16 — 24 and Kevin Parsons 13-10 — 23.

Game time is 8 p.m.

Cowens goes to the Tigers

Times News Services

California Angels acquired power-hitting Jason Thompson from Detroit on Tuesday in a trade which sent versatile outfielder Al Cowens to the Tigers.

Thompson, a 25-year-old first baseman who has played 4½ years in Detroit, is expected to be installed as designated hitter for the Angels — at least until Don Baylor, the 1979 American League most valuable player, comes off the injury list.

Baylor is expected to miss about six more weeks with a broken wrist.

Thompson, hitting just .214 this season with four homers and 20 runs batted in, was notified of the trade while he was with the Tigers in New York. He was expected to join the Angels in time for tonight's game against Texas Rangers.

Cowens, 28, has played every outfield position, as well as designated hitter, in his first season with the Angels after six years in Kansas City. He was hitting .227 with California, including one homer and 17 RBIs.

The 6-foot-4, 220-pound Thompson had his best year with Detroit in 1977 when he hit .270 with 31 homers and 105 RBIs.

Age doesn't slow standardbreds

By BILL WALKER

Age is seemingly no barrier to a standardbred. Not a good one.

True, the older they get the less they run in the big events, but that doesn't stop the best from carrying on — and winning.

Take Tuesday night at Sandown for instance.

Winner of the seventh race, a $2,500 claimer, was the bay gelding Pineland N and winner of the sixth, a claimer for $2,000, was the brown gelding Flamingos Pride.

Well-known names, both of them, and well-known in harness racing for a long time.

For Pineland N is 14 years of age, just one shy of retirement, while Flamingos Pride, a former stakes horse, is 13 years of age.

Standardbreds can't compete after they reach the age of 15.

And not only did Pineland N win his race, with Jim Gagnon in the seat, but it was his third win of the Sandown meeting, his fifth in a row, his ninth of the year and the 19th time in 22 races he has been in the money this year.

Not a bad record of consistency and over the years Pineland N has earned over $93,000 for his various owners.

Flamingos Pride is right there too in the consistency division. With Dave Sibiga teaming, Flamingos Pride's victory was his second in a row here and his third in his last four starts. In his career, he has earned over $94,000.

Both were well fancied at the mutuels, Pineland N being a 3-2 choice and returning $5.20 while Flamingos Pride paid off at $9.50.

And incidentally, second in the race to Flamingos Pride was another from the old school. Anderson Bonnios is also 13.

And while the veteran pacers were having their night in the cold, a bay filly began her racing career with a victory.

Crystal Set, a three-year old owned by Ontario interests and driven by Phil Coleman, just romped in her debut to win as she pleased.

Crystal Set returned a whopping $74.40 on the front end and combined with second-place Gwen Seelster for a $238.60 exactor.

Otherwise, Grant Hollingsworth took the lead in the drivers stakes.

Hollingsworth had three winners, Holridge Cindy ($5.50) in the first, Rays Golden Patch ($20.50) in the second and Nechako Chris ($7.10) in the fifth.

Gagnon had a pair of winners. Besides Pineland N, he brought home Linton Hanover ($10.80) in the featured ninth.

The triactor of Shady Hill Donna ($12), with Greg Tonkin driving, Combat Lands and Not Too Shabby paid $210.70 in the 10th.

Racing resumes Thursday with first post at 5:30 p.m.

Smith's bird pastels encourage retirement

Glen Smith will leave a two-part legacy in his chosen field — one concrete in the form of excellent paintings and the other a radical but logical concept.

Smith, whom I first met on the summit of Mt. Washington several years ago, recently retired for the second time after 20 years as a wildlife biologist.

His first retirement was in 1973 from the provincial fish and wildlife branch. After that, he spent about four years as a consultant before rejoining the provincial government with the resource analysis branch.

His painting, a hobby "that got out of hand," is partially responsible for his re-retirement.

And a measure of his succcess in creating lifelike renditions of wild birds may be found in the number of painting commisioned by his fellow biologists, who would certainly be critical of any departures from color or form.

Smith, who admitted he's "always had a fancy for birds," explained that his painting might take a new turn.

"I've been doing mostly bird portraits in pastels but my kids gave me a set of oil paints for Christmas so I think I'll get into oil painting too. I'd like to get into a different medium."

He works a lot from memory but sometimes refers to photographs and museum skins.

"Once you get that familiar with them you can just do them without any reference."

He started painting at an early age.

"I used to do it when I was a kid," he explained.

Then, getting a job, attending university and spending five and a half years in the army "took up a large chunk of life when I didn't do any painting."

"I picked it up about three years ago as a hobby. It's sort of a hobby that got out of hand."

Obviously there must be some special attraction involved with painting.

"There's a lot of personal satisfaction involved. It gives you something tangible.

"The trouble with the work I did is it's all abstract — written reports, advice to the minister — it's all airy-fairy subjective stuff.

"One thing about sitting down and painting. It's either good or it's bad — but you can see it and touch it.

"It's kind of fun."

Smith does plan to do a little consulting work — "but not very much."

"I don't want to do it on a full-time basis."

He explained his reasons for maintaining contact with the biological work:

"Painting is a very solitary existance. To me it's some kind of outlet, some kind of contact with the world around me.

"I'm still interested in the environment and it's always a challenge to try and do something to improve the situation — even though it may be frustrating at times."

Smith also recognized a certain fact of life.

"There's a lot of younger people coming into the field too. New ideas. The longer you're around the more you tend to repeat yourself.

"I guess I'm most interested in trying to develop new approaches to the way society manages the public resources. The way we have been doing it in the past is just not good enough — it's a constant process of attrition.

"I don't think it has to be. There's got to be trade-off somewhere where the environment becomes more valuable than its exploitation."

On Friday, we'll explore some of Smith's thoughts on a way we could improve wildlife-forestry relations in British Columbia.

NIBBLES: Island Mountain Ramblers have a number of intriguing outings scheduled in June.

If you plan on attending one — or joining — make sure you phone the trip leader at least two days before the departure date to say you're coming and to get the latest information.

The trips:

On June 7/8, the Ramblers have a strenuous snow and ice slog planned on Mt. Baker. (Margaret Symon: hm - 753-3789 wk - 753-1112 or Dave Coombes: 384-6396).

The same weekend, on June 8, there will be an easy family hike to Gem Lake (Scott Larsen: hm - 334-2515 wk - 334-4532).

A trip to Long Beach is set June 14/15 for rock climbing practice, hiking along the beach or canoeing in Kennedy Lake. (Brian Johnson: 592-6402 or Margaret Symon: 753-3789) (canoeists call Warrick Whitehead: 748-1374).

There will also be an outing June 15 to explore an old gold mining area on Old Wolf Creek. (Mac Page: 478-2804).

On June 21/22, there is an expedition to climb Mt. Elkhorn — the second highest peak on Vancouver Island at 7,190 feet. (Johnson or Mike Taylor: 748-1309).

Or, if you're not up to that climb, try an easier one up Mt. Moriarty (5,283') in the Nanaimo Lakes area June 22. (Kirstene McAllister: 758-6133).

Mt. Shuksan, near Mt. Baker, will be scaled June 28/29. (Bob Hinds: 598-7898).

The same weekend a work party is scheduled to clean up the trail which travels up the headwaters of the Puntledge River. (Don Apps: 334-2849).

On June 28-July 1, there's a canoeing and climbing expedition to Donner Lake in Strathcona Park. Call well in advance. (Johnson).

Top Spaniard upset

PARIS (AP) — Peter McNamara of Australia became the first man to eliminate a seeded player in the French Open tennis championships, upsetting 11th-seeded Jose Higueras of Spain 6-2, 6-4, 6-4 today in a first-round match that had started Tuesday night and had been halted by darkness.

The $650,000 tournament, rated the world's top event on slow clay, went into its third day.

Vitas Gerulaitis, the No. 5 seed, found his form again and demolished Fritz Buehning of West Germany 6-1, 6-2, 6-1.

"I didn't play my best tennis," Gerulaitis said. But it was an improvement on his recent form. He lost to Thierry Tulasne, a 16-year-old French boy, in the Italian Open and had a tough five-setter before overcoming Peter Elter of West Germany in the first round here Monday.

Bjorn Borg of Sweden is defending his title, which this year is worth $53,000.

Hana Mandlikova of Czechoslovakia, No. 7 seed in the women's singles, defeated Marita Redondo of the U.S. 6-3, 6-2 in the first round.

Bettina Bunge of the U.S. scored one of the fastest victories of the morning play, sweeping past Sabina Simmonds of Italy 6-1, 6-1. Nina Bohm of Sweden eliminated another American, Betsy Nagelsen, 6-0, 4-6, 6-1.

The women's singles has been devalued by the absence of Martina Navratilova, practicing on grass for Wimbledon; Tracy Austin, taking exams; and Australian veteran Evonne Goolagong Cawley, injured.

The only nominal upset was the defeat of Andrea Jaeger, the 14-year-old from Lincolnshire, Ill.

Tennis deadline approaching

By MAX LOW

Time is rapidly running out!

Time, that is, to get your name in for the seventh annual Victoria Times Public Parks Tennis tournament.

Entries for the summer-long tourney for public parks players close at 5 p.m. Saturday, leaving you just three days to make the cuttoff.

When entries close, the draw will be made out by a combined committee of the Times editorial department and co-sponsors Vancouver Island Tennis Association (VITA) and cards will be mailed to one of each pair drawn telling them who they play and what arrangements to make. First-round matches will begin the following weekend, June 7, and competitors will be given 10 days in which to play and get the result back in to the Times.

Entries have been flowing in steadily with the total on Tuesday standing at 170 — half of which are for the always popular men's singles event.

Once more, all the women who play regularly on public parks courts in Greater Victoria are shy in coming forward and so far there are only 21 entries in the singles and a mere nine in the under-18 junior girls' event. Unless we receive at least 16 in the junior girls singles by closing time on Saturday, we will be forced to scrap it and include the junior entrants in the women's event.

So far there are 22 entries for the junior boys singles and that's only half the total entry for that event last year. Twenty couples have entered the mixed doubles.

The tourney winds up on the weekend of Aug. 23 and 24 with the semi-finals in all events on the Saturday and the finals on the Sunday, all at Oak Bay's Henderson Park courts.

Engraved trophies will be presented to the winners and runners-up in each event by the Victoria Times with a bonus prize of a new tennis racquet for every winner courtesy of Centre Court Racquets in the Stadacona Centre on Pandora.

A full copy of the draw for each event will be posted in both the Times newsroom and in Centre Court Racquets and store owner Ken Holman says he'll also have an extra prize thrown in this year for each of the runners-up.

But this week is your last chance. We can't take any entries after 5 p.m. Saturday — so get yours in before then!

Six Islanders survive cuts

BURNABY — Six players from the Lower Island Youth Soccer Association Selects will return here in two weeks to continue training for the British Columbia under-16 squad.

Scott Longpre, Brian Mousley, David Houston, Jeff Mallett, Adam Keith and Chris Smith survived cuts at a camp last weekend.

Selects were eliminated from the Vancouver Whitecaps under-16 tournament Saturday, losing a quarter-final match 6-4 to Delta Selects on corner kicks.

Argonauts sign Island product

TORONTO (CP) — Toronto Argonauts of the Canadian Football League have signed kicker Ian Sunter, wide receiver Paul Pearson and linemen Al MacLean and John Foubert, all Canadians.

Pearson, 22, a native of Campbell River, came to the Argos after being cut by Calgary Stampeders early last season.

Edmonton Eskimos, in what the Canadian Football League team described as "one of the most difficult personnel decisions in many years," today traded quarterback Bruce Lemmerman to Hamilton Tiger-Cats for Canadian running back Neil Lumsden.

The Eskimos said in his nine years in Edmonton, Lemmerman, 35, contributed in every possible way to the winning tradition the club has developed and he deserves a chance to play in 1980.

Lemmerman joined the Eskimos in mid-season 1971 after three years with Atlanta Falcons of the National League. He led Edmonton to five consecutive victories and won his first three games in 1972 before an injury put him out of action for the rest of the season.

He shared quarterbacking duties with Tom Wilkinson during the next five seasons as the Eskimos began to emerge as a power in the CFL. The arrival of Warren Moon in 1978 bumped Lemmerman to the sidelines. He did not play in a regular-season game in 1978 or 1979, although he stayed with the Eskimos in a coaching capacity.

Lumsden broke into the CFL with Toronto Argonauts in 1976. He was rookie-of-the-year in the Eastern Conference and a runner-up for the CFL's most outstanding rookie award. He was traded to Hamilton in 1978.

Elsewhere and otherwise in sports . . .

Dietmar Moegenburg of West Germany equalled the day-old world high jump record of seven feet, 8½ inches Monday at a track and field meet in Rehlingen. The mark had been set Sunday by Poland's Jacek Wszola, the 1976 Olympic champion, at a meet in Heilbronn, West Germany. The previous record of 7-8¼ by Vladimir Yashchenko of the Soviet Union had stood since June 16, 1978.

And on the track, Sebastian Coe, holder of three world records, ran the second-fastest 800 metres in the world this year at the British Inter-Counties track and field championships in Birmingham. Coe was clocked in one minute, 45.4 seconds, only three-fifths of a second slower than the time set by West Germany's Andreas Busse earlier this year. But he was three seconds off the world record he set last year.

World class was displayed in a pool when Petra Schneider of East Germany shattered her own world record Tuesday in the 400-metre medley at the national swimming championships in Magdeburg. Schneider was clocked in four minutes, 38.44 seconds, well under the mark of 4:39.96 she set last March 8 in Leningrad.

Top Scots club squad to face Bays Thursday

By MAX LOW

Powerful Stewarts-Melville, fourth-ranked club side in Scotland, arrived here today to wind up their five-game Canadian tour with a match against B.C. club champions James Bay Athletic Association at 7 p.m. Thursday at Royal Athletic Park.

The Scots downed Surrey Beavers (the side James Bay edged in the provincial final) 22-3 in their opening game, tied with UBC Old Boys and easily beat Richmond before concluding their mainland visit against the Trojans.

Stewarts-Melville finished fourth in league play in Scotland, won the prestigious Murrayfield Sevens tournament and is renowned for its entertaining, fast open back play and for its determination to run the ball at every opportunity.

The touring side is captained by Douglas Morgan, a former Scottish and British Lion scrum-half, and other ex-internationals include vice-captain and wing forward Alex Brewster and standoff-half Ian Forsyth.

James Bay, which usually tries to dominate things in the forwards, is hurting a little up front for this big match as both tight-head props Ron McInnes and Mick Eckardt are out with suspensions.

Sent off during the B.C. game against Wales in Victoria last week, McInnes is awaiting his fate at the hands of the Vancouver Island Rugby Union's disciplinary board but faces a probable four-game suspension which could carry over into the start of next season.

Seems that justice is more just for some — even in rugby — as Eckardt was handed an eight-game suspension for fighting with University of Victoria Vikings forward Gary Dukelow during the league playoff final here, while Dukelow's four-game suspension was lifted because he was a Canadian national team trialist.

James Bay coach Tillman Briggs will go with young tight-head prop Tim Crawford, brought up from the club's second team, for the match with Stewarts-Melville.

Boitano is back with Vancouver

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Relief pitcher Dan Boitano, shelled for seven home runs in 11 appearances for Milwaukee Brewers, has been assigned outright to Vancouver Canadians.

Boitano, 27, led the Pacific Coast League with 19 saves at Vancouver last season.

Race drivers suspended

PARIS (AP) — Four leading French Grand Prix drivers and the Ligier racing team have been suspended and cannot run in the Spanish Grand Prix next weekend unless they pay heavy fines, the French Auto Sports Federation said Tuesday.

Federation president Jean-Marie Balestre, also president of the International Auto Sports Federation (FISA), said the running of the French Grand Prix June 29 could also be compromised by the problem.

Ligier drivers Jacques Lafitte and Didier Pironi, Jean-Pierre Jarier of Tyrrell and Alain Prost of McLaren were among drivers who did not attend pre-race briefings at the Grand Prix races in Belgium and Monaco in the last month.

Duncan gets berth in B.C. puck league

DUNCAN — Cowichan Valley Capitals will make their debut in the Tier II B.C. Junior Hockey League in the 1980-81 season.

Details of the new organization are expected to be announced at a press conference Friday at the Cowichan Valley Recreation Centre.

Final approval of the new Duncan franchise and the return of Langley after a year's absence is expected at the league's annual meeting June 12.

Capitals, who will play home games in the 1,500-seat Rec Centre, are expected to compete in the Coastal Division with Nanaimo Clippers, Langley, Abbotsford Flyers, NorWes Caps of North Vancouver, Richmond Sockeyes and Chilliwack Colts. Bellingham Blazers have indicated they might move to White Rock for the coming season.

The league is planning several changes in format, including reduction of the number of games from 55 to 50 and elimination of inter-divisional play.

Six-month holiday Proudfoot's view

COURTENAY (CP) — Veteran defensive back Tony Proudfoot says he's looking at the coming season with B.C. Lions as a six-month holiday.

"I've been given a leave of absence from my teaching job in Montreal and my family and I are approaching this season as a holiday for all of us," said Proudfoot, who was acquired by the Lions from Montreal Alouettes recently in exchange for Doug Carlson, another veteran Canadian defensive back.

Proudfoot, a participant in five Grey Cup games, said the trade caught him a bit by surprise.

"It's a bit of an insult to a person's ego to be told you no longer fit in a team's plans, but you can either accept it and look on it positively or let it bother you.

"The good part is that if I'd been asked where I'd like to be traded, Vancouver would have been my choice. If it had been Toronto or Hamilton I think I would have retired."

The Lions, hoping to improve their hitting from the safety position, plan to use Proudfoot there, which suits the 30-year-old Montreal native just fine.

"I've played both at inside halfback position and at safety and I actually prefer safety," Proudfoot said.

Bob earns Open berth

MILTON, Ont. — Gar Hamilton of Toronto came up with a record-matching 66 to snatch victory out of Bob Beauchemin's grasp but the southpaw's second-place finish in the Ontario Spring Open golf tournament was good enough to give Victoria a second representative in the 1980 Canadian Open.

For Beauchemin, the exemption into the Canadian Open was far more valuable than his $800 cheque here.

Jim Rutledge is Victoria's other starter in the Canadian Open, earning his exemption by winning the B.C. Open last fall at Glen Meadows.

Hamilton's round Tuesday made up a three-stroke deficit. Hamilton was 72-66 — 138 for his two rounds while Beauchemin finished one shot back after rounds of 69 and 70 for a one-under 139.

Phil Hardy of Richmond Hill, Ont., finished third at 141 after a round of 70.

Hamilton, who won $1,000 here, also earned a berth in the Canadian Open field in Montreal starting June 19.

Ken Fulton of Toronto tied for fourth at 143 with Vancouver's Ray Stewart. Defending champion Bob Panasiuk of Windsor, Ont., finished at 146 despite a 69 Tuesday.

Interest drop to spur builders

VANCOUVER (CP) — Building contractors who had almost deserted construction when consumers shied away from borrowing at high interest rates now are expected to return to the market as rates drop.

"The higher interest rates caused an almost total stop in builder speculative housing," a spokesman for the Canada Housing and Mortgage Corp. said Tuesday.

"Early indications are that the drop in mortgage rates may bring the small builders back into the 'spec market.' "

In April, single-detached housing starts in B.C were the strongest in Canada, with 1,553, up 52 per cent from 1,023 starts a year ago, say corporation figures. For Canada as a whole, such starts were down 12 per cent from April last year.

"The 1,153 single-detached starts represented 33.16 per cent of all starts of single-detached houses in Canada," said the spokesman.

In the period Jan. 1 to April 30, B.C. total residential starts rose by 78 per cent from the same period last year.

In the Vancouver area, there were 5,041 housing starts of all types in the first four months, up 48 per cent from the 3,405 starts in the same period of 1979.

Greater Victoria residential starts were up in the first four months by 126 per cent, to 924, up from 408 between Jan. 1 and April 30 last year.

Apartment availability in Vancouver continues to be lowest in Canada, with Victoria in second place, both with a vacancy rates around 0.1 per cent.

Housing starts are expected to drop dramatically to an annual rate of about 135,000 in May and June as the damper of high interest rates in the past few weeks works through the system, said the corporation spokesman.

Mail blitz organized on BCRIC share pickup

Letters are being mailed this week to 63,000 British Columbians who applied for their five free shares in the B.C. Resources Investment Corp, but didn't pick them up, the finance ministry said Tuesday.

The letter asks for return of a post-paid form confirming the applicant's address. The shares then will be sent to the applicant by registered mail.

"We hope by this method to reach as many people as possible," said Finance Minister Hugh Curtis.

Photography of the future is here right now at your nearest LONDON DRUGS Store.

A quality 35mm camera that takes all the "problems of the past" out of photography. Auto Focusing means you don't have to worry about distances anymore . . . you won't have to make manual focus adjustments, you won't miss a crucial moment . . . a subject in motion . . . a fleeting expression. Best of all, the superbly-designed Minolta Hi-matic AF completely eliminates human error in selecting distance, aperture or shutter speed.

When the light is too low for normal exposure, a lamp in the viewfinder signals to pop up the camera's built-in electronic flash. Both shutter speed and aperture settings for correct flash exposure are automatically made by the camera. Working in concert these automatic systems free you as never before from the fuss and bother of setting controls.

Bring on new issues, says confident chamber

The Greater Victoria Chamber of Commerce is looking for trouble.

"Our members are saying most of the city's problems have been solved," president Cedric Steele said.

"It's a strange situation. The enthusiasm is fading away."

So the chamber is looking for new issues.

It began 1980 with a list of 10 urgent problems to deal with but they have either been resolved — or pushed ahead to areas where other agencies are now wrestling with them.

And there is a feeling of well-being in the business community after the successful launching of the convention centre and the establishment of the jetfoil service between Victoria and Seattle.

Several other issues have been dealt with, including the signing of a contract to have the chamber take over duties of the economic development commissioner.

All this has happened during the past two months.

"It is nice to solve problems but we have suddenly run out of steam. Our committees are saying they have nothing left to do."

In an effort to find new problems to wrestle with, the chamber has called a special directors meeting for noon today.

There may also be a meeting of the full area-wide membership later asking for suggested issues to pursue.

Steele said there are some major unresolved problems the chamber might look at.

One is the question of the proposed fixed link with the Lower Mainland.

The chamber has supported a provincial government decision to spend about $100,000 to check on the feasibility of some type of fixed link.

But the chamber has not yet voted on whether it in fact wants the link.

Steele thinks a limited fixed link might be useful.

He sees a tunnel or bridge that carries freight and passengers aboard an electric train. If the link is a tunnel it should also carry the natural gas pipeline and electric power cables as part of a cost package.

"I get the feeling, even in the business community, that we don't want cars coming over here in a fixed link. There would still be a ferry service. And there would be more room on the ferries because the freight would come on the electric train."

The chamber will also be monitoring the progress of the proposed natural gas pipeline, which would bring signficant economic benefits to Vancouver Island, he said.

Provincial Energy Minister Robert McClelland has said the pipeline is in the works, after the Public Utilities Commission this summer holds hearings on route proposals.

But the future of the pipeline has been clouded by recent talks between Ottawa and Victoria. Federal funding would be a vital element in making the pipeline a reality.

The chamber plans further discussions with McClelland on the status of the project.

Steele said a new issue the chamber may get involved in is the long waiting list at local hospitals.

He said it is shocking that some people have to wait half a year for an operation.

Trustees opt to set own pay

Greater Victoria school trustees can judge their own worth — subject to correction by the electors.

The point was made by School District 61 trustee John Young as the board agreed on a response to a B.C. School Trustees Association questionnaire polling trustees on how indemnities should be set.

The circular gave school boards a choice between indemnities set by the Public Schools Act, as now done; amount set by individual boards; and guidelines by the education minister.

Greater Victoria trustees also preferred to allow the board chairman a higher amount.

Legislation now limits indemnities to $2,000, but Education Minister Brian Smith has said this is not enough.

So far, the other southern Vancouver Island school districts have each indicated a different preference in the BCSTA poll. Saanich wants an independent body to set the amount and Sooke opts for the status quo.

Young said trustees are able to make a responsible decision and take the consequences.

Community school idea backed

A request to school trustees to make Northridge Elementary into a community school is being backed by 85 per cent of area residents who responded to a letter survey by the principal.

Northridge principal Janet Mort said the proposal is also supported by staff and administration as a means of serving the educational and social needs of pupils and the community at large.

A similar application for community school status has gone to Greater Victoria trustees on behalf of Shoreline Junior Secondary.

Shoreline principal R.J. Mark said the plan has backing from the school's parent advisory committee, View Royal Parks and Recreation, Craigflower and View Royal elementary schools, View Royal Ratepayers and the View Royal-Craigflower parents' associations.

Mark said he is totally committed to the community school concept, which he said will improve services to children, families, the elderly and public at large through information, library, credit and non-credit courses, hobbies, crafts, cultural and volunteer programs.

Nova Scotia degrees for trio

Two out of three architecture students with Victoria links were among award winners earlier this month at Nova Scotia Technical College.

Thomas Dutton, of McBride, B.C., won the school's alumni medal for scholarship, personality and leadership. Sebastian Butler, of Victoria, was winner of the Royal Architectural Institute of Canada medal.

Andrew Brown, also of Victoria, obtained with Dutton and Butler his bachelor degree in architecture and environmental design after four years at NSTC.

Brown was an honors arts graduate of University of Victoria, and Dutton left UVic with a bachelor of science degree in physics.

Welfare mom shuns lie detector

VANCOUVER (CP) — City police occasionally ask welfare recipients to take lie detector tests to verify their reports about lost or stolen money, says a police officer.

But a 29-year-old mother of two on welfare, who says she was asked to undergo the tests, says she considers the treatment tantamount to being called a liar.

The woman, who asked only to be identified as Linda said in an interview her wallet, containing $45, had recently been stolen. When she phoned police to report the loss, the answering clerk, learning that she was on welfare, told her she would have to take a polygraph test.

The clerk said the theft report couldn't be completed until Linda had taken the test.

"I didn't like it at all," Linda said. "I was being treated like a liar only because I am on welfare."

She said her call was then switched to Staff Sgt. Nick Lohin. She told him she couldn't take the test because of nervousness which might register as lying, but Lohin replied the machine could be adjusted to compensate for anxiety.

"The human resources people will not reimburse people unless the loss or theft has been reported to the police," Lohin said in an interview. "If there is serious doubt about the report, we occasionally ask them to take a polygraph test and advise them they could be charged with public mischief if the report is untrue.

"In the first 10 days of every month, we are deluged with reports from people who have lost their welfare money or had it stolen."

John Noble, deputy minister of human resources, and a Vancouver welfare official, denied the tests are department policy.

"We do ask that our clients report the loss of money to the police and that they sign a statement at the welfare office but there's been no requirement for polygraph tests," Noble said.

"I'll be talking to the Vancouver police about this."

Lohin says the procedure involving polygraphs had been worked between ministry officials and police about 18 months ago.

Mounties collar spray bombers

Duncan RCMP have rounded up five youths in connection with a spray-painting binge last weekend involving two schools and the new RCMP detachment building.

A police spokesman said charges are expected to be laid later this week.

Vandals sprayed Grad 1980 in large black and white letters on outside walls at the Mount Prevost junior high and Cowichan senior high schools.

They also sprayed the new RCMP building under construction on Canada Avenue.

The spokesman said the buildings will have to be repainted at a cost of several thousand dollars.

The RCMP will be seeking full restitution, the spokesman said.

Bank profits rise amid credit card rumblings

MONTREAL (CP) — Two Canadian chartered banks announced hefty profits today as rumblings began in Ottawa over credit card interest rates.

The Bank of Montreal said its profit for the quarter ended April 30 reached $62.6 million, up $14.6 million or 30.4 per cent from the same period of 1979.

For the first half of the 1980 fiscal year, profit rose to $124.6 million, or $2.52 a share, from $106.5 million, or $2.21 a share.

In Toronto, the Bank of Nova Scotia reported profits rose 21 per cent in the six months ended April 30.

As the banks announced the profit growth, the parliamentary secretary to Finance Minister Allan MacEachen warned Canadians should not use credit cards if they are going to be hit by 24-per-cent interest rates.

John Evans, Liberal MP for Ottawa Centre, said credit cards can be a good deal because consumers have up to 50 to 60 days of free credit before interest rates apply.

But he agreed with New Democrat David Orlikow (Winnipeg North) that interest rates of 24 per cent planned by VISA and Mastercharge, several department stores and major oil companies are too high.

The companies announced recently they were raising their rates to 24 per cent from current levels of 18 to 21 per cent.

"I agree that beyond that (free) period that 24 per cent is a high rate and a high rate that should not be paid if there are other alternatives," said Evans.

But most credit-card holders have a good credit rating and can easily secure a loan to cover long-term needs from banks or credit unions where interest rates have fallen sharply in recent weeks.

The prime rate — the rate which banks charge their best customers — now is 13.75 per cent, down from a high this year of 17.5 pec cent.

Rather than face 24-per-cent interest rates, Evans said the government "would encourage the consumer to seek out these loans."

Orlikow said the increase in credit card rates while interest rates are tumbling is "legalized loan-sharking."

Taking into account the huge profits of the banks and oil companies which run the credit-card operatons, the increases amount to "legalized robbery," he added.

A recent Gallup poll indicates 51 per cent of Canadians never use a credit card and of that figure, 60 per cent are 18 to 29 years old and 50 years or over.

The principal users of Visa, Master Charge and gasoline credit cards are between 30 and 49 years of age, but only 26 per cent use them regularly and 39 per cent use them occasionally.

Titanic far costlier on film

scott's world

by vernon scott

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — In 1912, it cost England a piddling $4 million to build the Titanic, the greatest, safest luxury liner in the world which collided with an iceberg and sank on its maiden voyage.

In 1980 it cost Sir Lew Grade and his Marble Arch Productions almost 10 times as much — $30 million so far — to produce Raise The Titanic! from Clive Cussler's best-selling novel.

A ¾-inch-to-the-foot, 55-foot-long, 12-foot-high Titanic model cost $375,000 alone. Smaller models brought the miniature fleet cost to $1 million.

When Raise The Titanic! is released this July it will be one of the most expensive films in history, ranking right up there with Apocalypse Now, 1941 and the unreleased Heaven's Gate and The Blues Brothers.

The most costly aspect of the film was building a tank — $3.5 million — in which the Titanic could be realistically photographed under controlled conditions at the bottom of the ocean.

And therein lies an epic tale of movie extravagance.

Three years ago Lord Grade paid $500,000 for film rights to the novel. Stanley Kramer took over as producer-director.

Ten months into the project, Kramer exited. William Frye, a logical choice, was appointed producer. Frye made Airport 1977, featuring a jetliner on the bottom of the ocean which is floated to the surface.

Frye was immediately confronted by the almost insurmountable problem of determining where to shoot the underwater footage of the model of the ship as it is supposedly resting 12,000 feet under the surface of the Atlantic.

To begin with, the Titanic model was built and reposed at the CBS Studio Center in the semi-arid San Fernando Valley. The nearest body of water was the totally dry Los Angeles riverbed.

"Kramer had planned to film the undersea footage near Long Beach or off the coast of Catalina," said Frye, an urbane and articulate man. "But we couldn't shoot in the ocean at shallow depths because of the fish and plant life.

"At 12,000 feet there are no fish or living plants. So we had to find a tank big enough to hold the model and make it all look realistic."

It became evident Marble Arch would have to build its own tank. The British company chose Malta where there already was a 200 by 300-foot, 5-foot deep surface tank (too shallow for its purposes) overhanging the Mediterranean.

Marble Arch then constructed a deeper round tank 350 feet in diameter, holding 9 million gallons of sea water. The tank, a year in the building, is the largest in the world.

Frye found himself confronted by another puzzle. How to transport the 55-foot model from the San Fernando Valley to the Mediterranean, via the Panama Canal, and into the tank at Malta.

Last October Frye called his friend Antonio D'Amico, an Italian shipping magnate, who agreed to ship the model, along with smaller models, on the deck of one of his freighters as far as Naples. The cost: a paltry $150,000.

"First," said Frye, "we had to get Los Angeles county and city permission to lug our huge model on a truck bed down the freeways to the San Pedro docks. That was a spectacular operation in itself."

Service Friday for former chief

Former Saanich police chief William Albert Pearson died Monday night after a lengthy illness.

Pearson, 68, was chief for 16 years and retired in 1971. He was credited with guiding the force through its years of major development.

A memorial service will be held at St. Aidan's United Church, 1691 Broadmead at 3 p.m. Friday and a seven-man honor guard from the Saanich force will be at the service.

Provincial Secretary Hugh Curtis, who was mayor of Saanich from 1964 to 1973, said today Pearson presided over the most dramatic growth of the police department and did so admirably.

"To a large extent he is responsible for the high regard in which the force is still held, particularly on a one-to-one basis in the community," Curtis said.

"He came from the community, and although he moved up through the ranks, it never touched his humanity.

"He was a good cop and a good leader," Curtis said.

Pearson was born in Taber, Alberta, on Sept. 20, 1911, and was six months old when his parents moved to Victoria.

He joined the five-man Saanich force as a motorcyle policeman and stayed with the department 33 years.

At his retirement he was in charge of a 75-man force with a support staff of 12 civilians.

In 1942 he became the municipality's first juvenile officer and helped establish the Coldharbour Road juvenile detention facility.

Pearson was a founder and director of the Boys Club of Victoria and director of the Family and Children's Service, as well as a long-standing member of the John Howard Society.

He was a member of the Saanich Rotary Club, the Mount Newton Masonic Lodge and Men's Canadian Club.

Pearson is survived by his wife Win; daughters Noni Clark, Sue McGifford and Joanne Pearson of Victoria; brothers Alec and Doug, Victoria and Dave, West Vancouver; a sister Kathleen Foreman of Ottawa; six grandchildren and one great grandchild.

Bulk fuel outlet to close

DUNCAN — The Cowichan Valley Consumers Co-op bulk petroleum plant will close Aug. 1 because of decreasing demand for its products.

Co-op president Ken McEwan said a year-long study showed that 51 per cent of the plant's customers have supplementary wood heaters in their homes and, of the remaining 49 per cent, 19 per cent intend to purchase wood heaters within the next year.

"This, added to the ever-escalating operating and delivery costs over the past couple of years, has made the closure decision necessary," McEwan told the co-op's annual shareholders' meeting.

The co-op also operates gas bars at Duncan and Mill Bay but they will not be affected when the bulk plant closes.

Before the judge

A 19-year-old woman who falsely reported she had been raped was given a suspended sentence and two years probation Tuesday in provincial court.

Patricia Constance Stewart, 129 Gorge East, was sentenced by Judge Lorne Pearce after a forensic nurse consultant described her as a compulsive liar undergoing treatment for the problem the last two months.

The incident, which led to a charge of public mischief, began June 14, 1979, when Stewart was living with her sister in Saanich. She took a pair of handcuffs which were to be used at a pre-wedding party and handcuffed herself to a bed after tearing the top of her nightgown. She told her sister, who arrived home at 4 p.m., and two male friends later that she had been raped by a 20-year-old mutual acquaintance.

Court was told the two male friends went to the residence of the man named and accused him of rape in front of his wife.

The man was so nervous during an interview by Saanich police that he actually admitted committing the act. Fortunately, Crown counsel Wayne Smith said, officers declined to lay charges against him.

More than two months later, Stewart admitted to a friend her story was fabricated and the friend advised her to call police. Stewart then admitted to officers she concocted the story to test her boyfriend's love.

Court was told the woman lost her job and is now on welfare.

Phil Bonneau, a forensic nurse consultant, said Stewart had a negative self-image which she tried to boost through confabulations, resulting in the loss of her friends.

Judge Pearce said he had thought of sending Stewart to jail but that would mean Oakalla which he considered the worst jail in B.C. The judge said he was satisfied the threat of jail has had a positive effect on Stewart.

"It's now up to you," Pearce told her. "You can't blame your parents any longer."

Stewart also pleaded guilty to charges of obtaining $1,893.33 in food and lodgings from the Red Lion Motor Inn, 3366 Douglas, by fraud, dealing in a forged $150 cheque signed in her sister's name, and false pretences in connection with a $250 cheque.

On each count, she was given a suspended sentence and six months probation as well as 50 hours of community service work. Stewart has 200 hours of community work to do in connection with previous convictions, court was advised.

Judge Gilbert Hogg ruled that a 47-year-old man had no grounds to point a rifle at three plainclothes RCMP officers Oct. 17.

Vincent Victor Gorman, now of 1409 Camosun, was charged with pointing a firearm without lawful excuse. He confronted the officers with a loaded .303-rifle at 4116 Sooke.

Defence lawyer Chris Brennan argued that Gorman had a lawful excuse because his house had been broken into four days previous to the incident and his stereo was stolen. Brennan supported his argument by saying that two days later three men went to Gorman's house, assaulted and threatened him, and smashed the glass in his front door. He said Gorman, in his own mind, had a lawful excuse to point the gun at what he thought were trespassers intent on harming him.

Hogg, in his ruling, said the officers had "implied leave" to enter the premises and stated it was unlawful to point a gun at an unknown person. He ruled that Gorman had no reason to believe the officers were people coming back to the property for reprisals.

He said it was a most serious offence because "guns go off" and that although no harm was done, serious harm could have resulted.

After learning that Gorman was on $321-a-month welfare, Hogg gave him a suspended sentence and nine months probation. Hogg also ordered Gorman to complete 150 hours of community service work and prohibited him from possession any firearms, ammunition, or explosives for two years.

His share: 10,000 pounds of pot

Plans were made in January last year to transport a cargo of 60,000 pounds of cannabis from Colombia to Alaska with transfer to take place on the high seas, a Victoria county court jury was told Tuesday.

Paul Oscar Nelson, 27, of Seattle and Marina del Rey, Calif., said 10,000 pounds were his, and the rest was divided between fellow defendant Jaime Marin, 38, of Marina del Rey, and a Colombian identified as Ramon Castano of Santa Marta.

Nelson said Marin's role was to be in charge of transport, while he was to make contacts for the receiving end.

Nelson, Marin and six other men are accused of importing cannabis marijuana into Canada a year ago and possession of marijuana for the purpose of trafficking.

He said he contacted an American in Southern California whom he had heard was involved in the fishing industry in Alaska. The man was interested in receiving the cargo but insisted the transfer take place outside territorial limits.

The eventual deal was $120 per pound in cash with $1 million to be paid at the time of transfer on the high seas and the rest in two to four weeks.

Nelson, born in Seattle and raised in Montesano, Wash., worked as a musician and waiter, and went travelling in Mexico in 1975 where had several jobs, including a shrimp freezing plant partnership in Mazatlan.

He said he sold his partnership in 1977 for 10,000 pounds of cannabis in Colombia.

While visiting Colombia, he met Marin who has a large rice mill in eastern Colombia and met Castano who took him to a jungle airstrip where his 10,000 pounds of cannabis was hidden. But arrangements for a DC6 aircraft to fly it out fell through and he returned to Los Angeles via Panama City and Mexico City in January, 1978.

He and Marin had agreed to keep in touch and in November, 1978, he heard Marin had moved his family to the U.S. He met Marin and found out he was in the import-export business in heavy equipment.

Nelson said Marin mentioned to him his contact with Castano and an interest in shipping cannabis north and would Marin and Nelson arrange buyers and details. Castano would get it to the coast, said Nelson.

He was to continue his testimony today.

Marco Antonio Lopera Penagos, 60, of Mellin, Colombia, who said he agreed to an offer of $50,000 by Marin and Castano to skipper the Panamanian freighter Samarkanda owned by Marin from Tumaco to Alaska with a cargo of "hierba" (grass) with transfers on the high seas, completed his evidence Tuesday.

He said it was a group decision by officers of the Samarkanda, but his final decision, to seek shelter in B.C. because of problems with generators and engines and dirty fuel.

He said the life of the crew and the safety of the ship were at stake.

While in No Name Bay at the head of Sydney Inlet, the ship grounded and with a list of 15 degrees he ordered the cargo of more than 600 bales unloaded to stop a capsizing.

Penagos said the intention was to reload the morning of May 22, 1979, when the Samarkanda could be refloated because the destination was not No Name Bay on Vancouver Island but the high seas 200 miles west of Alaska.

Penagos said he gave an unsigned statement to RCMP two days after his arrest but he said the officer understood Spanish poorly, that the statement produced in court was in poor Spanish, a point confirmed by the official translator who said some of the words weren't even Spanish.

The statement said, in part, that he was told the ship was ready to sail at Tumaco with its cargo and was to go to Juneau.

But in court, Penagos said he told the RCMP officer the trip was to a point 200 miles off Alaska, that there was no intention to come to Canada, that the cargo was unloaded because of an emergency.

Penagos insisted he told the officer it was his job to receive and deliver the cargo in the high seas "but he didn't write that down." He denied telling the officer the ship left Tumaco loaded.

He also denied telling the officer the Samarkanda had problems with one of her engines. In court, he said he told the officer he had problems with "engines."

He also said the officer misunderstood another reply and that he didn't say that the Samarkanda's radio operator told him to go ashore and unload the ship.

Penagos said the Samarkanda picked up the "hierba" from an air drop between April 7 and April 30, 1979, set course for the north, and had one engine fail May 17. A decision was made May 20 to head for land. There was a two-hour period when the Samarkanda was without both engines. One was restarted May 21 and both were running as she approached Sydney Inlet.

He agreed that by the morning of May 21, "our biggest danger was over." But he said it was still necessary to reach shelter to solve problems with engines and fuel.

New family life program

A revised family life program will be designed for Saanich School District following a study by two committees.

Trustees agreed Monday to examine the community's needs and look at programs in other districts.

Members of the community, trustees, the Saanich Teachers Asociation and social agencies will be asked to provide direction for a revised program.

A second group will be formed on the basis of this committee's recommendations to review the current program, Dimensions in Living.

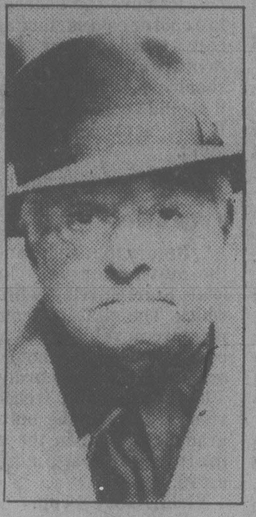
When Wanda Bork lost an incredible 402 pounds, bringing her bulk from 541 down to a svelte 139, everyone should have been happy. Not everyone was. She says in the June issue of Good Housekeeping magazine her husband panicked at first to find himself living with a "strange woman," and once became so frustrated "he actually threw chocolate bars at me." Then came calls from the National Association for the Aid of Fat Americans saying, "you were a lot prettier before you lost all that beautiful weight." But the sweet taste of victory came the day she tried to take her husband's pickup from his company parking lot and was challenged by a co-worker. Said he, "You're not John Bork's wife. I've know her for years. John's wife is big and fat. . . ."



Jessel

Singer George Jessel got toasted and roasted recently by some of Hollywood's biggest stars to mark his 82nd birthday and his 71st year in show business. George Burns, Jimmy Stewart, Sam Jaffe and Barry Sullivan got together in Hollywood to honor Jessel, who at one time worked as a bat boy for the New York Giants. "It seems like I've been talking about George Jessel all my life," quipped Burns.

Elizabeth McFadden did something recently that pleased and surprised a lot of people: she walked through Dorval Airport on her own. Just a year ago, the 12-year-old New Yorker arrived here for an operation which doctors hoped could restore feeling and use to her right leg, which had been severed at mid-thigh when she fell under a train. Accompanied by her parents, Elizabeth is back here this week for tests to determine exactly how well she is progressing.

Usually these little stories where the jilted lover lays out a bundle to put up a billboard begging his beloved to come back wind up with love and kisses and a tearful embrace. But not this one: Jim Daniher of Los Angeles rented a billboard in the Lawndale section last week in a last ditch effort to win back his girl, Marla Andrews. A friend saw the sign and told Marla, who gave her friend a message to deliver to Jim. "Jim, your determination is admirable, but it's over. Love, Marla. — No, wait a minute. No 'love.' Just, 'Marla.' "

Dear Abby:

An attractive, blonde, 53-year-old divorcee is renting our small guest house. We heard that she was involved in a scandal back East, so she left her home and family and came west to live on a limited income.

The last six months she has been chasing our 92-year-old neighbor — a very wealthy widower who is alert, lively and in remarkably good health.

It all began when she started taking him special foods and phoning him several times a day. Now the affair has progressed to where she has been spending most of her nights at his place!

Half of my family says there's no fool like an old fool and if she takes him to the cleaners, he asked for it. The other half is so disgusted by this blatant fortune hunter that they want us to throw her out of the rental. They say by not doing so we are a party to it. Please give us your opinion.

Turned Off Landlords

Dear Turned Off:

Your tenant's private life is none of your business. Furthermore, if you should throw her out of her rental, the lovely, lively 92-year-old widower will probably take the poor, homeless lady in!

Dear Abby:

I'm another one of those "Never thought I'd write to Dear Abby" persons.

I have a daughter-in-law who never calls me to extend a dinner invitation. She always has our son do the calling, which irritates me, as there is no reason why she can't call me personally.

This seems to be a common problem among mothers-in-law. I truly want a good relationship with my son's wife and will abide by your decision. If you print this as a help to other mothers-in-law in the same boat, sign me . . .

Irritated

Dear Irritated:

If you truly want a good relationship with your son's wife, you will not make an issue of who does the calling. Most mothers-in-law seldom see their sons unless mom does the inviting.

Dear Abby:

I must comment on the controversy concerning bullfighting. What surprises us Spanish people is that Americans condemn bullfighting but see nothing wrong with the outrageous savagery of their so-called sport, "boxing."

How can you condemn bullfighting and approve the brutality of two human beings beating each other with the ultimate purpose of knocking the opponent unconscious, which at times has caused fatal results?

It is inconceivable to us that a civilized country permits such inhumane contests causing swollen eyes, bloody noses and faces beaten to a pulp!

David Fronseca,
East Ridge, Tenn.

Dear David:

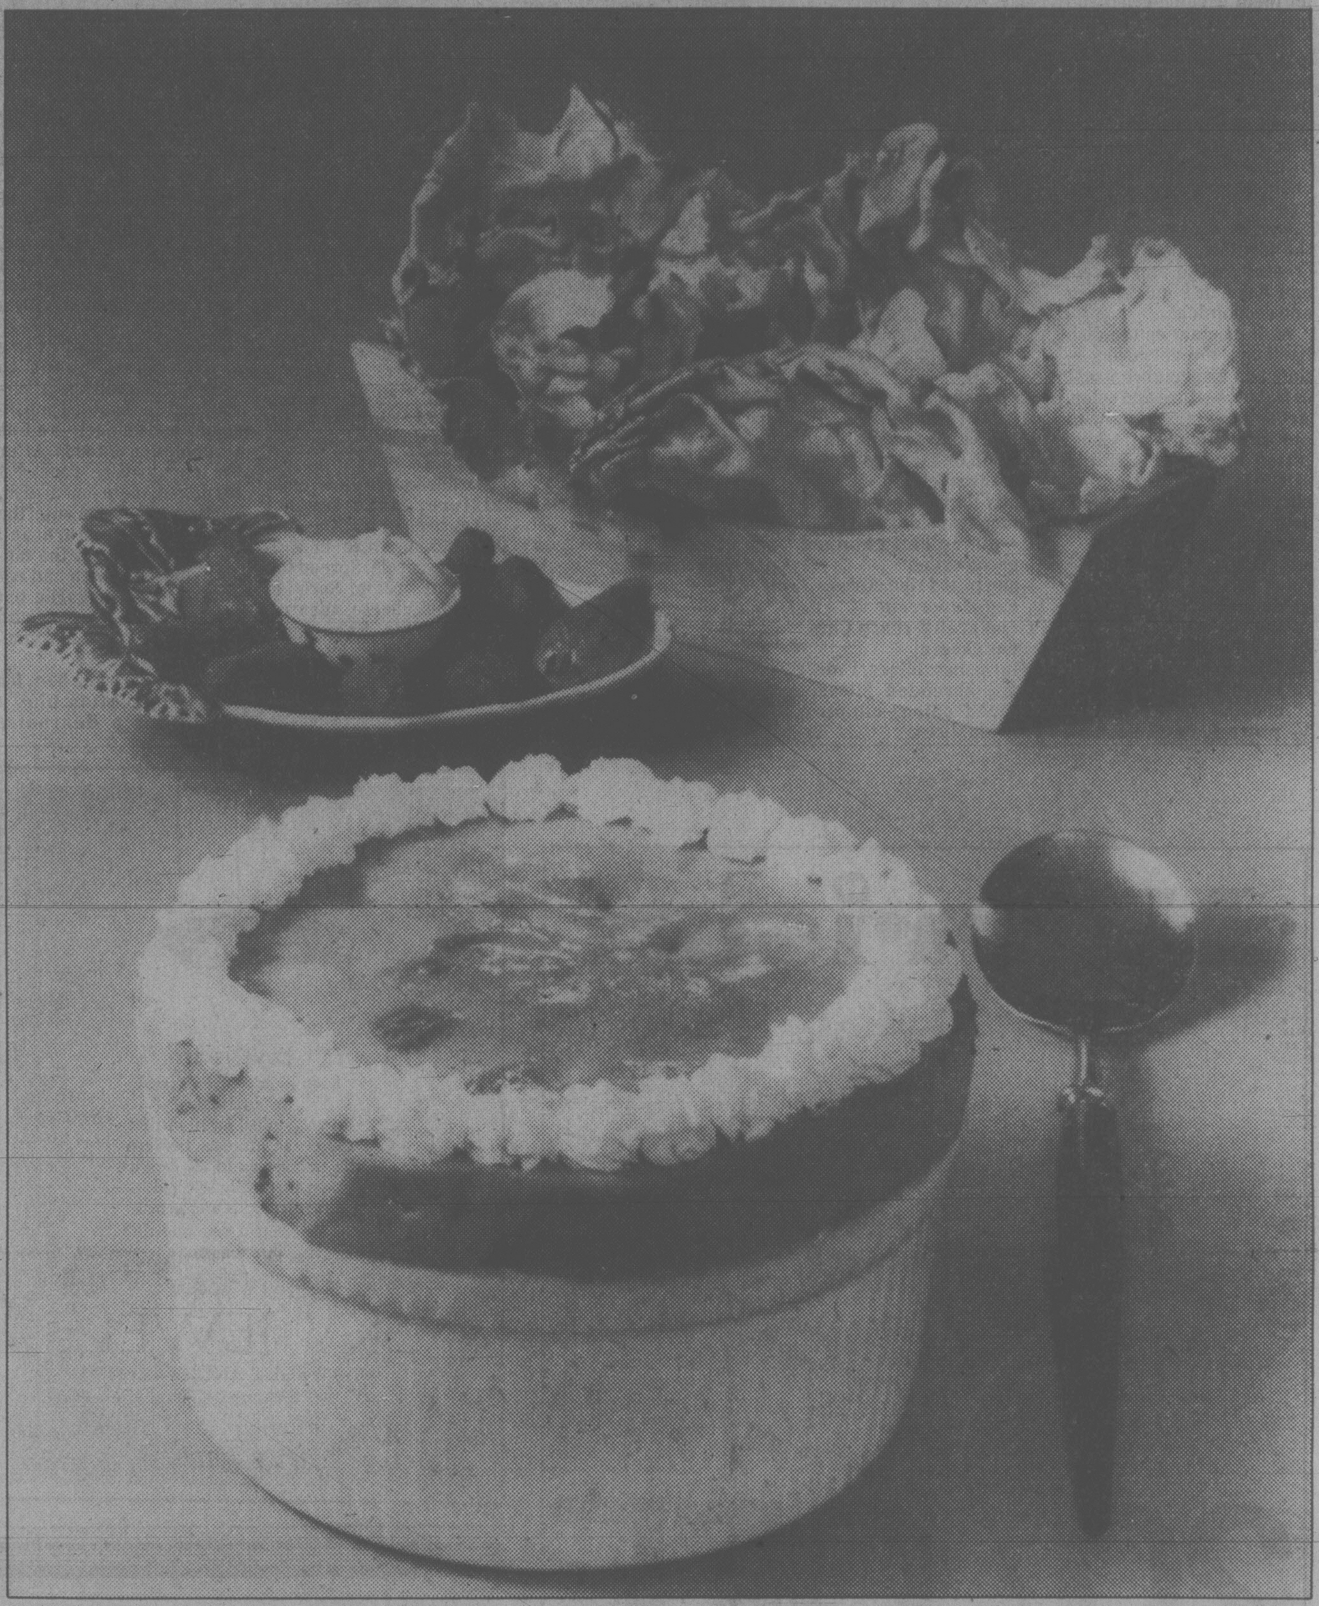
At the risk of opening another bull session, I'll repeat my comment: "All sports in which blood (animal or human) is spilled should be outlawed." However, in boxing, the boxer comes into the ring voluntarily.

Strawberry treats in season

Strawberry season has arrived! You can have as much fun berry picking as you can creating tasty strawberry treats. A fresh ripe strawberry should be bright red, plump, sweet, and juicy. Strawberries are high in Vitamin C, potassium, and low in calories; it's no wonder they're such a favorite part of summer days.

Though many of us enjoy strawberries simply with a dollop of whipped cream, this popular fruit may be served in countless ways. The key is to be imaginative and original. Strawberries need not be served for dessert. For an innovative dish try Ruby Salad, fresh berries tossed with crisp lettuce and topped with a frosty fruit dressing.

The fluffy strawberry dessert souffle salad, with it's fresh lively flavor, will add a touch of elegance to your summer meal.



The strawberry souffle above makes a light elegant dessert while strawberries give the chicken salad at right an intriguing flavor.

RUBY SALAD

1 large head lettuce
500 mL strawberries, washed, hulled and sliced
250 mL mayonnaise
250 mL orange, lemon, lime, or raspberry sherbet, softened

Shred lettuce into large bowl; add strawberries. Stir together real mayonnaise and sherbet. Cover; chill. Makes 500 mL. Just before serving pour dressing over lettuce and strawberries. Makes 6 servings.

STRAWBERRY DESSERT SOUFFLE SALAD

3 cups lightly sweetened sliced fresh strawberries
2 cups boiling water
2 packages (3 ounces each) strawberry flavored geletin
½ cup dry sauterne or Rhine wine
1 cup mayonnaise
1 cup diced canned pineapple, drained
1 cup finely chopped pecans

Drain strawberries; reserve berries and ½ cup juice. If necessary, add water to bring volume of juice to ½ cup. Prepare gelatin as directed on package. Add reserved ½ cup strawberry juice, wine and real mayonnaise. Blend with rotary beater. Pour into freezing tray or metal loaf pan. Chill in freezing unit about 20 to 25 minutes or until firm about 1 inch from edge of pan but still soft in centre.

Turn mixture into bowl and whip with rotary beater until fluffy and thick. Fold in berries, pineapple and nuts. Prepare collar of double thickness foil about 3 inches high, to fit around rim of 1½-quart souffle dish. Tightly fasten around dish with string or rubber band, extending collar 1½ inches above rim. Pour mixture into souffle dish. Chill in refrigerator about 1 hour or until firm. Remove collar when ready to serve. Makes 8 to 12 servings.

STRAWBERRY CHICKEN SALAD

½ cup mayonnaise
2 tablespoons chopped chutney
1 tablespoon lime juice
1 teaspoon each grated lime peel, salt and curry powder
2 cups diced cooked chicken
1 cup sliced celery
¼ cup chopped red onion
1½ pints fresh strawberries, stemmed
Lettuce leaves
Mint sprigs

In large bowl, mix together mayonnaise, chutney, lime juice and peel, salt and curry powder. Add chicken, celery and onion; toss, cover and chill. Just before serving, slice 1 pint of the berries; gently toss with chicken mixture. Line platter or individual serving plates with lettuce. Mound chicken in centre. Garnish with whole strawberries and mint. Makes 4 servings.

Surgery can correct nearsightedness

Surgery for severe myopia, or nearsightedness, has captivated the attention of eye surgeons for many years. In fact, as far back as 1700, and again in 1890, the highly myopic eye was thought to be curable by the removal of the lens. The technique was unsatisfactory and the operation was abandoned.

Only very recently, a surgical technique was developed in Russia by Dr. S.N. Fyodorov. By cutting the cornea with 16 or more radial cuts, severe nearsightedness has been relieved.

Dr. Fyodorov, director of Moscow's Research Laboratory of Experimental Eye Surgery, claims 97 percent success in more than 2000 patients treated by this technique since 1974.

A group of American surgeons went to Moscow in order to watch the procedure and to learn the technique. These doctors, scattered over the United States, are now trying to duplicate the Soviet surgeon's results. They feel that this procedure has great potential and deserves to be pursued in the United States.

Oncologists are physicians who specialize in the treatment of cancers with chemicals. They are constantly on the scientific trail of chemo-therapeutic agents that treat cancers without causing unusual side effects.

Recently, a new drug, harringtonin, was isolated from a Chinese evergreen and found to be extremely useful in the treatment of some forms of leukemia.

At a recent conference at Columbia University, Dr. Xu Bin, of the Chinese Academy of Sciences in Shanghai, spoke impressively of his results with this drug. One of the doctors who recently returned from Shanghai, Dr. I. Bernard Weinstein, was very enthusiastic about the early findings. He said, 'This is just the beginning, for the Chinese have a wealth of tradition in the area of natural or herbal medicine. They can uncover dozens, if not thousands, of new drugs to be tested."

The substitution of methadone for heroin has been of great value. Unfortunately, methadone itself is addictive and has produced a great many offshoot problems of heroin addiction.

Now, at the Harvard Medical School, researchers are using a new experimental drug, buprenorphine, that can suppress heroin addiction without inducing any significant dependence of its own.

"What did you do to Dad's chair?"

Mexico dish that's 'old hat'

In Mexico, stale corn tortillas and other leftovers are never thrown away, but are recycled by resourceful cooks into a tasty dish called chilaquiles. Here's a delicious version named Chilaquiles Casserole.

''Chilaquil'' actually means a broken-up old sombrero. As the name implies, the tortillas are torn or cut into strips or wedges, then fried in hot oil until stiff and tough — but don't let them become crisp and brown like chips.

Chilaquiles Casserole calls for shredded chicken, but shredded beef, ground beef or shredded turkey would be equally delicious. Just simmer the meat or poultry with onions, chopped tomatoes, chicken broth and ripe olives. Layer in a casserole with the tortillas, top with sour cream, cheese and olives, and bake. It's quick, easy and economical.

As important as the dish itself are the garnishes — they add a special contrast of flavor, texture and color. Accompany a serving with any of the following: whole pitted ripe olives, thinly sliced or chopped onion, shredded lettuce, cilantro, sour cream, avocado slices or radish roses.

CHILAQUILES CASSEROLE

1 dozen stale corn tortillas
½ cup chopped onion
2 tablespoons oil
2 large tomatoes, finely chopped
½ pound cooked and shredded chicken (about 2 cups)
1 10-ounce can chicken broth or 1¼ cups homemade stock
1 envelope (1¼-ounce) taco seasoning mix
1 4-ounce can chopped green chiles
1 cup pitted ripe olives
½ cup sour cream
1 cup grated sharp Cheddar cheese

Garnishes: olives, radish roses, shredded lettuce, chopped onion, cilantro, avocado slices.

If tortillas are not stale, dry slowly in a low (200 degree) oven for 20 minutes to one hour. Cut tortillas into strips or wedges and fry in hot oil until chewy and tough — not crisp. Drain well on paper towels and salt lightly.

Slice ripe olives, reserving four for the top.

In a large skillet saute onions in oil until trnsparent. Add tomatoes and cook briefly. Add shredded chicken, chicken broth, taco seasoning mix and green chiles. Simmer uncovered 10-15 minutes. Stir sliced olives into chile mixture. Make several layers each of tortillas and the chile mixture in a 2-quart casserole. Spread top with sour cream. Sprinkle on grated cheese, then reserved olives. Bake uncovered at 375 degrees for 20 minutes. Serve with garnishes.

Serves six.

Lamb chops: a saucy treat

the 60-minute gourmet

When visited by colleagues from France one thing that has impressed me is their universal praise of North American lamb, which they consider equal, if not superior, to European lamb. Lamb is one of the finest of meats grown in this country and is, to my taste, superior to beef both in flavor and texture.

Lamb chops are, of course, a luxury item — not quite as expensive as veal but certainly more costly than chicken. It is the sort of food that is generally served on special occasions.

I like my lamb with or without sauce. Given a choice, it should be broiled with a hastily made noisette butter with a touch of minced garlic poured over. I have a cousin, however, who, when he comes for a visit, generally asks for lamb chops broiled with a Bearnaise.

In recently serving grilled lamb chops to guests, I served them surrounded by sauteed mushrooms and spinach — a fine combination of foods. After the chops were cooked I arranged them on a dish, surrounded them with the mushroom mixture and poured over them the noisette butter, which had not only a touch of garlic but also a quick deglazing with a touch of red wine vinegar.

There is a recipe here for that preparation plus a recipe for a Bearnaise sauce, which is not all that difficult to make and certainly does not require much time.

COTES D'AGNEAU GRILLES
(Broiled lamb chops)

4 double loin lamb chops, about half a pound each.
Salt and freshly ground pepper to taste.
2 tablespoons butter (see note).
1 teaspoon finely minced garlic.
1 tablespoon red wine vinegar.
1 tablespoon finely chopped parsley..

1. Preheat the broiler.

2. Sprinkle chops with salt and pepper. Arrange the chops on a broiler rack. Place the chops under the broiler, the top of the chops about four to five inches from the source of heat.

3. Broil until nicely browned on one side, about five minutes. Turn and continue broiling five minutes or until nicely browned on the second side.

4. Meanwhile, heat the butter in a skillet and when it is foaming add the garlic. Cook briefly, swirling the skillet, and add the vinegar. Cook about 10 seconds and stir in the parsley. Pour this sauce over the chops.

Yield: 4 servings.

Note: If you prefer to use Bearnaise sauce, do not use the butter with garlic, vinegar and parsley as indicated in the recipe.

EPINARDS SAUTES AUX CHAMPIGNONS
(Sauteed spinach with mushrooms)

1 pound fresh spinach in bulk or one 10-ounce package fresh spinach.
3 tablespoons butter.
½ pound mushrooms cut into quarter-inch-thick slices.
Salt and freshly ground pepper to taste.
1 teaspoon finely minced garlic.

1. Bring enough water to the boil to cover the spinach when it is added. Add the spinach and cook about one minute. Drain well. When cool enough to handle, squeeze the spinach between the hands to extract most of the moisture. Chop coarsely.

2. Heat two tablespoons of the butter in a skillet. Add the mushrooms, salt and pepper. Cook, stirring often, over high heat until the mushrooms are browned.

3. Add the remaining tablespoon butter and add the spinach. Cook, stirring, about 30 seconds. Sprinkle with garlic and stir. Serve hot.

Yield: 4 servings.

SAUCE BEARNAISE

¾ cup butter.
1 tablespoon finely chopped shallots.
¼ teaspoon freshly ground pepper.
2 tablespoons finely chopped fresh tarragon or 1 teaspoon dried.
2 tablespoons red wine vinegar.
1 tablespoon water.
1 egg yolk.

Melt the butter and set it aside.

2. Combine shallots, pepper, half of the tarragon and all of the vinegar in a saucepan. Bring to the boil and cook until vinegar is evaporated.

3. Remove the saucepan to a cool or cold surface and let stand about five minutes. The mixture should not become cold, but it should cool down a bit or it will scramble the egg yolk.

4. Add the water and egg yolk and start beating with a wire whisk.

5. Return the saucepan to the stove over very low heat. Start stirring with a whisk. The mixture should increase in volume and become thickened. Do not boil or the egg yolk will curdle.

6. Off the heat, stirring vigorously, add the butter gradually. Beat in the remaining tarragon and serve.

Yield: About ¾ cup.

Huff, puff and blow food cost down

There's a funny attitude about meatless meals still found in some parts — too bad, because there are many non-meat protein foods that also make great meals. And what is so special about these foods is their cost . . . generally less than meat, fish, or poultry.

Eggs, less than a dime apiece and usually already available in the refrigerator, are the protein part of this recipe for Broccoli Puff. Not only is it economical to prepare, but also easy to serve. The well-seasoned broccoli-and-rice mixture is topped before baking with yolks and whites of eggs beaten separately, then folded together.

It's a delicious dish! The eggs and broccoli blend well together, and the rice stretches them both into four generous servings. Rice is even more economical than eggs. At three cents per half cup, rice is handy in meal planning these days.

BROCCOLI PUFF

½ cup chopped onions
2 tablespoons butter or margarine
1 can (10¾ oz.) condensed cream of mushroom soup
2 cups cooked rice
1 pkg. (10-oz.) frozen chopped broccoli, cooked and well-drained
1 teaspoon Worcestershire sauce
¼ teaspoon thyme
2 cups grated Cheddar cheese
4 eggs, separated

Saute onions in butter until tender. Stir in soup, rice, broccoli and seasonings. Turn into a greased shallow 2-quart casserole. Bake at 400° for 20 minutes. Meanwhile, beat egg yolks until thick and lemon-colored; add cheese. Beat egg whites until soft peaks form; fold in egg yolk mixture. Remove casserole from oven; stir. Spread egg mixture over top. Bake 15 minutes longer or until golden brown. Makes 4 servings.

Each serving provides 549 calories.

Many ways to dish up cottage cheese

hilda beastall

Cottage cheese is a year round source of good quality protein, a quarter cup of skim milk cottage cheese providing 10.7 grams protein as against 8.3 grams for one full cup of skim milk, according to the nutrient value chart issued by National Health and Welfare, Canada.

Several other values are listed in vitamins and minerals including calcium and iron so that as a food, cottage cheese compares favorably with milk, although it costs much more than homemade yogurt. Yogurt made from fortified skim milk powder rates well in low cost protein when made at home.

A quarter cup serving of cottage cheese is superior to a half cup of ice cream in all readings except that of vitamin A which is found in the high fat content of ice cream. So unless you must build up weight, use skim milk cottage cheese. The two per cent dry curd type is the next best value, having some fat, while the creamed style has still more fat added which means more calories.

The easiest way to use cottage cheese is as a dressing for vegetable salads and with raw or cooked fruits. Summer, winter or spring, a salad of some kind is of daily importance and when uncooked vegetables and fruits are used, requires little time to prepare. In place of expensive bought salad dressings or mayonnaise, a quarter cup of cottage cheese adds food value. With whole-wheat or rye bread, a hard-boiled egg or a chunk of Cheddar cheese, a salad is turned into a complete meal. Each person regulates the quantity to suit personal needs, but content need not vary for any age from preschooler to the oldest active person.

For variation in use, make Cottage Cheese Casserole for first course with a vegetable, or as dessert after a salad.

COTTAGE CHEESE CASSEROLE

1 cup cottage cheese
2 Tbsp soft margarine
1 small egg, separated
3 Tbsp skim milk powder
3 Tbsp water
¼ tsp salt
1 Tbsp wheat germ
1 tsp brewer's yeast

Mix cottage cheese with margarine, egg yolk, skim mild powder, water and salt. Add wheat germ and brewer's yeast. Fold in the stiffly beaten egg white.

Turn into a small, lightly greased casserole. Bake in moderate oven 177 degs. C. for 30 minutes until set and lightly brown Serves two.

For a Sunday breakfast or Saturday night supper, Cottage Cheese Pancakes can be a nutritious meal. Use the 2 per cent dry curd.

COTTAGE CHEESE PANCAKES

1 cup cottage cheese
4 small eggs, separated
1 tsp brown sugar
½ tsp salt
¼ cup unbleached flour
1 Tbsp wheat germ
1 Tbsp wheat bran
½ cup ground nuts
3 bananas sliced OR other fresh sliced fruit

Separate yolks from whites of eggs.

Measure cottage cheese into large bowl; beat with electric beater at low speed until soft; or it can be done with hand rotary beater, starting off with a fork. Beat egg yolks, sugar, salt until thick; add the cheese and stir in flour, wheat germ and bran.

Beat egg whites until stiff and old into cheese mixture, also nuts.

Grease a heavy pan or grill; use about ¼ cup batter for each pancake. Brown lightly, turn and brown second side.

Keep pancakes warm between folds of clean, warm towel on warm plate in oven.

Serve in twos with sliced bananas, sliced strawberries, cooked prunes or your choice of fruit between as filling. Makes 12 pancakes.

By keeping the fat and sugar to a minimum, there is plenty of high quality food value in each pair of pancakes. Don't overcook; serve as soon as possible and have a couple of kinds of fruit prepared to make a choice possible.

The next recipe is a sort of cheesecake usually considered a rich dessert. This one is not terribly rich though it cannot claim to be a weight reducer. Neither is it fabulously expensive to make. The pound of cottage cheese is the most costly.

For a special occasion dessert which is almost a meal, try this.

COTTAGE CHEESE CAKE

Under crust:
¾ cup unbleached flour
cup wheat germ
¼ tsp salt
1 tsp sugar
1 Tbsp soft margarine
1 small egg

FILLINGS

2 cups cottage cheese
1 cup homemade yogurt
3 small eggs, separated
1 Tbsp lemon juice
2 2 Tbsp sugar
¼ tsp salt
¼ cup wholewheat flour

Mix ingredients for crust into crumbly mixture and press into a 9 or 10-inch pie plate (a spring-form pan is easiest, if possible).

Beat cottage cheese and yogurt first with a fork, then with rotary beater or electric beater; add egg yolks, lemon juice, sugar, salt and flour. Beat until fairly smmoth. Fold in stiffly beaten egg whites, and pour into the prepared crust.

Bake in a moderate oven 177 deg. C. until the centre is firm and crust is lightly brown about 40 minutes.

Run a knife around the edge to loosen from side of pan but allow to cool in a warm place before cutting or removing from pan.

This Cheese Cake is delicious with homegrown sweet berries, and looks truly elegant served on green salad plates.

Home-grown chefs scarce: hotel man

NIAGARA FALLS, Ont. (CP) — Well-trained and dedicated Canadian chefs are hard to find, says a top restaurant official who looks overseas for qualified workers.

Hank Pellerin, 38, Dutch-born executive chef at the CP Skylon Tower in Niagara Falls, said he had to go abroad to bring in three chefs to work with him this summer.

"There are good Canadian chiefs, but they are hard to find," Pellerin said. "At the moment I cannot find good help.

"We pay good wages, but I have to hire people from overseas for the six summer months.

"They'll be coming from Holland, Germany and Switzerland with cook's papers."

Carolina cookin' not Yankee style

craig claiborne

A few weeks ago, I wrote an article about Sherrill Roth of Statesville, N.C. The spirit of the article was how to cope with cooking in the hinterlands when you can't suddenly get into a taxi and find the likes of fresh coriander, imported cheese, a dozen kinds of imported mustards and so on — all the fine things so immediately available in Manhattan.

This brought forth an amusing letter from John David Richardson of Manhattan, a true defender of the South, who says: "For the past few years I have been self-exiled here in Yankeeland and only a stone's throw from 'the tender herbs and vegetables of Balducci's' and two stone's throws from the bakers of Bleecker Street.

"Now that I know how Mrs. Roth solved her gustatory problems, maybe you can help me with mine. I am what could be called an antigourmet. No, I don't attack my neighbor, James Beard — anti in the sense of 'opposite of,' i.e., I'm not particularly adept in the kitchen. However, I do love my native foods, the forementioned Carolina cookin'.

"Now, what recourse do I have as a noncreative exile? Mail can travel the other way — South to North. Is there a Southern equivalent to your gourmet-goodies-by-post? (I dream of someday opening a shop called The Dixie Deli, complete with fly papers and a cooler of Nehi on the front porch; could I make a living peddling Moon Pies in Manhattan?)

"Is there a way for me to get liver mush (or liver pudding, if you prefer) without making a round trip on Piedmont? How can I overcome the lack of salt-rising bread here in this city where the little mites, whose efforts are accredited to salt, refuse to flourish (you already answered this one, and thanks?) Where can I get pimento cheese that is untrammeled by Kraft? (Actually, I have learned to prepare this.) Which bakeries can furnish me with light, delicious soda biscuits or crunchy-good corn bread made with white, stone-ground meal — and does not have the taste and texture of cake, Yankee style?

"And then there is the problem of fresh collard and turnip greens that only a trip to Harlem (had some good hoppin' john up there recently) can solve. Or consider the problem of explaining to a Yankee butcher what fatback is (when will Northerners learn English?). I could go on and on, but I think I've made my point (even Faulkner knew when to stop).

"When I first moved to New York, I asked the manager of my A & P if he would order some frozen collard greens for me; after all, other ethnics had aisles of pasta, rice and beans, pickled herring, etc., at their disposal. He gave me an astonished look and said as much as 'nice people don't eat collards.' After I knew him better, he did order the greens at my request. One Saturday morning I was awakened by a telephone call from him. 'Mr. Richardson,' he blurted, 'if you want the collards, you'd better get down here fast.' I got there in time to get the last package. There are evidently a lot of not very nice people in the Gramercy Park area!

"Another favorite tale along these lines concerns my friend, Sally Batson, from Greenville, S.C. She called one day to ask if I needed any mayonnaise. It seems that Sally, not finding Duke's mayonnaise at her local Gristedes, had written 'Mr. Duke.' His reply was a case of mayonnaise a la Richmond — and

I'm sure Sally must still have some of this treasure stashed under her bed!

"I digress, but we Southern nongourmets do have problems, too — and a great deal of fun trying to solve them."

-In response to a recent query, we stated that huile de noix, or walnut oil, which is widely used in French kitchens, could simply be substituted for olive oil when making salad dressings. John D. Baum of Oberlin, Ohio, describing a trip to France with his wife, writes: "We had dinner at Barrier in Tours, where we had asSD a first course asparagus. It was served in the traditional way, with a little wedge to tilt the plate up and was dressed with huile de noix, i.e., walnut oil. It was delicious, and we have come to prefer this to any other sauce with asparagus.

"It is also delicious with artichoke in place of hollandaise or other sauce. It can, as you suggest, serve as a base for salad dressing, but I fear much of its distinctive taste will be lost under the cloud of vinegar and spices."

Dig that chili skillet!

- 1 pound sausage meat
- 1 cup diced onion
- ¾ cup diced green pepper
- 1 (19-ounce) can tomatoes
- 1 cup water
- 1 cup broken spaghetti
- 1 to 1½ tablespoons chili powder
- 1½ teaspoons salt

Combine sausage meat, onion and green pepper in a large frypan. Saute over medium heat until meat is browned, about 10 minutes. Drain off fat if necessary. Add tomatoes and stir to break up. Add water, spaghetti, chili powder and salt. Mix until well combined. Simmer, covered, 25 to 30 minutes, stirring occasionally. (Makes four to five servings.)

Solving after-school 'hungries'

Fortunately there's a lot more attention being paid to the importance of nutritious snacks for children and many mothers are discovering that nutritious snacks can also be fun for the kids.

Here are three after-school snack ideas that easily add variety for the after-school "hungries."

Apples are always a favorite with children and adults alike. Here's an idea that turns an ordinary apple into a special treat. A delightful combination of cream cheese, raisins, and honey, with a splash of Worcestershire sauce, serves as a taste-tempting filling for Apple Sandwiches.

Pita bread, the bread with the hidden pocket, is another one of those fun foods. To make Nutty Egg Salad Sandwiches, cut the pita bread into quarters and fill with an appetizing egg salad mixture. This recipe adds a bit of mustard to the eggs for a bright golden color and sunny flavor, plus chopped peanuts for an exciting crunch the kids will love. This nutritious sandwich filling can be prepared in advance so that older children can make their own mini sandwiches when the appetite alarm sounds.

Then there's the ever-popular rabbit food such as carrot sticks, cauliflower, and broccoli. These are simmered just briefly, then marinated overnight in an oil and vinegar mixture spiced with worcestershire sauce. It's sure to be a hit with kids and adults alike.

Any of these snacks, teamed up with a glass of cold milk, provides good nutrition and a good time, anytime.

APPLE SANDWICHES

- 1 package (4-oz.) cream cheese, softened
- 1 tablespoon honey
- 1 teaspoon worcestershire sauce
- ¼ cup raisins, coarsely chopped
- 2 or 3 red apples, cored and sliced

Beat together until smooth and fluffy cream cheese, honey, and worcestershire sauce; stir in raisins. Spread between apple slices making "sandwiches". 6 servings.

NUTTY EGG SALAD SANDWICHES

- 4 hard-cooked eggs
- 3 tablespoons mayonnaise
- 1 tablespoon prepared mustard
- ¼ cup finely chopped celery
- ¼ cup chopped peanuts
- ¼ teaspoon salt
- 2 to 3 large or 4 to 6 small pita bread loaves
- 1 tomato, sliced

Chop eggs; combine with mayonnaise, mustard, celery, peanuts, and salt. Spoon into pita bread pockets and garnish with tomato slices. 4 to 6 servings.

CRISPY VEGETABLE SNACKS

- 1½ cups water
- ½ cup vinegar
- 2 tablespoons brown sugar
- 1 tablespoon worcesterhire sauce
- 1½ teaspoons onion salt
- 4 carrots, cut in sticks
- About 2 cups cauliflower and/or broccoli flowerets
- ¼ cup oil

Combine water, vinegar, brown sugar, Worcestershire sauce, and onion salt in medium saucepan. Add carrots, Cover and simmer 10 minutes. Add cauliflower and/or broccoli; add oil and chill 1 to 2 hours. Makes about 6 servings.

How to blend TV sports with cooking a pot roast

By MIKE McGRADY

Time is money . . . time is money . . . time is money. This great truth has been hammered into us ever since we first got paid by the hour. The great truth is most easily remembered on weekends, especially when man is asked to get out the storm windows or cook the dinner. However, on weekends it can also be forgotten, especially when man is asked to spend long hours chasing a tiny white ball around a golf course or whole days parked in front of the tube watching gridiron godzillas bump noggins.

Today's meal is a case in point. To put together a proper pot roast takes the better part of an afternoon — more than likely an afternoon already allocated to watching events set in distant exotic cities — South Bend, Dallas, Green Bay or Foxboro.

Today, the old two-birds-with-one-stone trick. Actually, there is no big trick to preparing this meal at the same time you're watching a footbal game. In fact, you'll find it a not unpleasant and intensely American combination — the spicy and heart-warming aroma of a pot roast bubbling gently on the stovetop, the televised sight of bone-crunching violence on the gridiron.

The Staples: Make sure these are all on hand: salt, pepper, flour, cinnamon, cloves, cooking oil, bay leaf, rum, eggs and butter.

your partner's cookbook

The Shopping List: One pot roast (preferably bottom round, between one and five pounds); consomme (one can); small white onions (two pounds); carrots (one pound); potatoes (three pounds); one large Bermuda onion; one 4-ounce jar horseradish sauce; one fresh pineapple; one small jar applesauce; one bottle red wine.

But when do you manage to do the cooking? Why, during the natural breaks in the action, of course. During the pre-game show, the time-outs, the half-time festivities, the slow-motion replays of the other team's touchdowns and whenever Howard Cosell delivers an opinion.

Prepare Before the Opening Kickoff: The meat.

Sprinkle salt and freshly-ground pepper over the entire surface of the meat and rub it in with the heel of a spoon. Now do the same thing with several tablespoons of flour.

Put four tablespoons of oil in a heavy casserole placed on medium-high heat. When oil is hot, add the meat. Brown the meat on all sides, tending it closely to make sure that it doesn't burn.

When meat has been browned, add the can of consomme and an equal amount of red wine. And a teaspoon of cinnamon, five whole cloves and a bay leaf.

This next step will appeal to anyone who is fond of torturing his wife. (And if you aren't fond of torturing your wife, what're you doing sitting on your duff, watching a football game on a beautiful day like this?) First, make sure she is watching you. Then calmly dump an entire jar of horseradish sauce (Danger! The four-ounce size!) into the pot. All of it. All at once. If your wife can watch you do this without screaming, the marriage is a sound one.

What happens, of course, is that the slow simmering robs the horseradish of its bite. Allow the mixture to come to a boil, then put the heat on low and cover the pot tightly.

During the First-Quarter Break: Prepare the vegetables.

Peel the small white onions and set them aside. Peel the carrots, cut them into thirds and set them aside. Turn the pot roast over.

During the Half-time Ceremonies: Add the carrots and the onions to the pot.

During Interview With Recently Fired Coach: Start the potato pancakes going. Peel the large Bermuda onion and grate it. Peel the potatoes and grate them and add them to the onion. Beat two eggs lightly, stir them in and add two tablespoons of flour. Now, back to the game.

During Close-Ups of the Dallas Cowgirls: Do nothing. Some things require full concentration.

At Game's End: The final preparations.

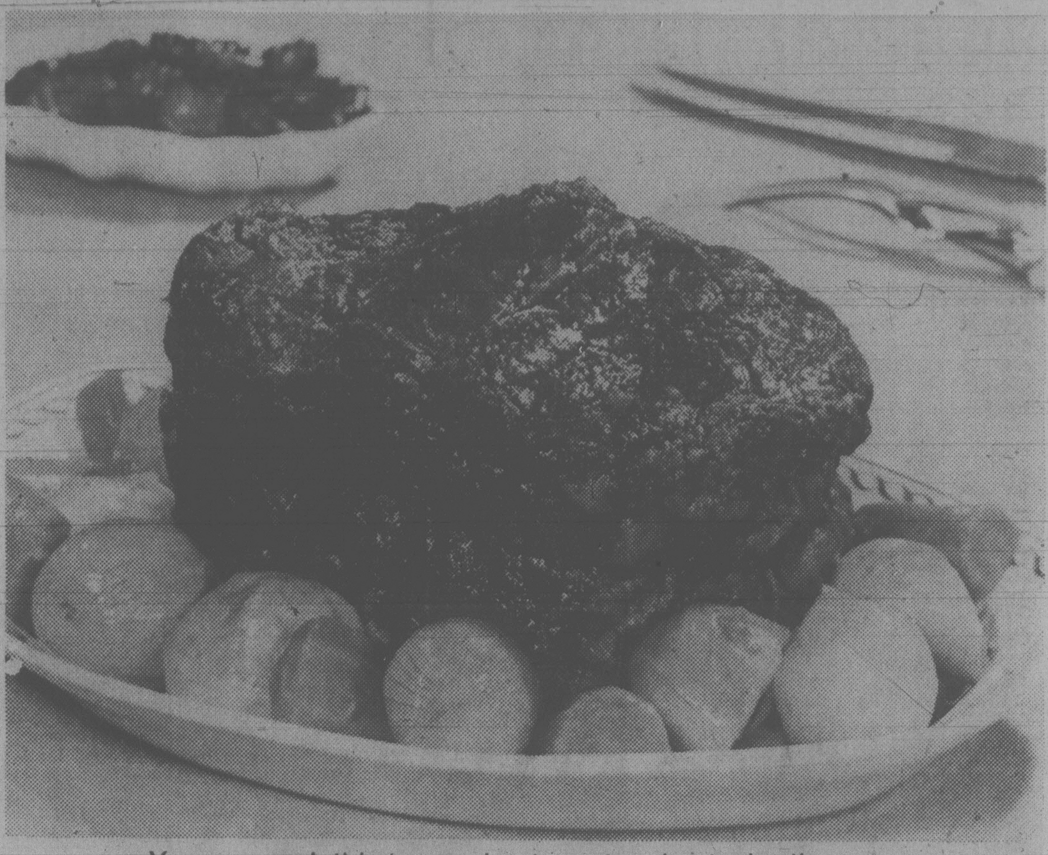
Add large spoonsful of potato mixture to the frying pan and cook the pancakes until they're golden brown on one side, then flip over. When they're cooked on both sides, drain on paper towels while a new batch is being cooked.

Meanwhile, test the pot roast to make sure it is done. The total cooking time should be around three hours. When it is done, meat is easily pierced by a fork.

And then you prepare the dessert. Cut the pineapple into thick slices and then cut away the skin and the eyes. Put pineapple slices under broiler for a short time, until they are softened, then add a small splash of rum.

The Proper Time to Serve Dinner: Between games.

Cut the beef into very thin slices and serve with vegetables and sauce. Serve the potato pancakes with a spoonful of applesauce (or sour cream). Followed by the warm pineapple. And now you can switch channels.



You can cook this 'proper' pot roast and not miss the game

Baron of beef not the same cut in Britain, France and the U.S.

questions and answers

Q. I have recently read an English novel in which they spoke of a baron of beef. Can you tell me precisely what a baron of meat is and why it is called that?

A. The meat that you call baron may depend on the country in which you are dining. In England one speaks of a baron of beef which, according to the much-quoted Theodora FitzGibbon in her The Food of the Western Worlds "the most magnificent of all English joints of beef."

"It consists of both the sirloins, cooked and carved as a single joint and not divided at the backbone," she writes. "It is usually roasted upon a spit and is used only for banquets, being too large for any other occasion."

In France and America one speaks ordinarily of a baron of lamb or of mutton. This consists of the saddle or double loin of lamb or mutton plus the two legs or gigots. The baron is roasted in one piece.

Romance has it that the name was bestowed on the meat by Henry VIII of England. A great gastronome, he was so impressed by the cut of meat as it came from the spit, he knighted it "sir loin, baron of beef."

Q. I have recently found a horseradish root at my local vegetable market. I have never prepared horseradish before. How do I go about it?

A. You simply peel off the outside of the root and grate it, using a standard grater that has a fine set of teeth. Or, if you want to make it in large quantities, you may use a food processor. Commercially made horseradish has white vinegar added with salt to taste and many people prefer this to the plain grated version.

If you make a large batch of horseradish with vinegar and salt, make sure that you keep it in a glass jar compactly filled so that there is as little air space as possible. Keep it tightly sealed and refrigerated so that it retains its pungent flavor. Horseradish is also delicious when grated and blended with cooled, finely grated beets.

Q. When I was a child, my mother often served us beef tea when we had a cold. I don't know how to make it. Do you have a recipe?

A. Years ago someone gave me a recipe for beef tea and I've never tried it. As well as I can reconstruct it, you take a batch of twice-ground beef and put it in a container with a tight-fitting lid. You add cold water barely to cover, salt and pepper to taste. Seal this mixture tightly and set the container on a rack in a basin of cold water.

Bring the water to the boil and let the mixture cook about one hour. Remove the container and let the beef cool. Line a sieve with a double thickness of cheesecloth and strain the "tea" through it. Refrigerate. Bring to the boil before serving.

It sounds like an awfully expensive cup of tea to me.

The original Gold's Fabric Store was founded in 1946 on South Granville Street in Vancouver. In 1973, it was expanded to include an additional store in Vancouver as well as stores in North Vancouver, Victoria, Richmond and Coquitlam.

According to Esther Emmott, District Supervisor of Gold's Fabrics in British Columbia, a demand for the quality which has established Gold's as the leader in fine clothing and home decorating fabrics, led to the decision to penetrate the U.S. market.

Mrs. Emmott, who has been associated with Gold's Fabrics since 1974, is a native of Okanagan Valley in the Southern Interior of British Columbia. After she graduated from Penticton High School, she studied marketing and fabrics and then opened her own fabric shop. After she sold her shop in 1973, she joined Gold's, where her knowledge of fabrics, sewing, design and display has been an important factor in the success of the store.

With seven well-staffed stores in B.C., Gold's has been a pioneer in importing a large selection of unusual fabrics — from around the world. This year, there has been a strong upsurge of interest in Chinese and Italian silks, Swedish drapery fabrics, Italian woollens, Spanish laces and chiffons.

Each fabric consultant in the stores has been trained to advise customers on the fibre content and the care of fabrics for each individual need. A large selection of instructional manuals, how-to-books and pattern books plus information handouts prepared by the staff is available in each store.

Gold's Fabrics' stores have responded to customer's interest in home decorating with displays that incorporate many ideas and fabrics. The main store in Vancouver has generated an unusual amount of interest recently with a window full of ways to use a quilted fabric that reverses from strawberries to dots and brightens up a kitchen or dining room.

One of the largest departments is drapery fabrics, where customers may select their choice from hundreds of colors, designs and textures and then make up their draperies at home or have them custom-made by skilled craftsmen. The store offers a shop-at-home service for draperies. Consultants will bring samples to the home, take accurate measurements and give a written estimate, without any obligation on the part of the customer. Draperies are pinch pleated — with four-inch hems, blind stitching.

Mrs. Emmott, whose true loyalty belongs in British Columbia, has helped establish Gold's fabrics in the United States in the mold she helped make so successful in Canada. She has made several trips to the U.S. to give advice on the display and merchandising of fabrics.

One area of particular interest to Mrs. Emmott is notions and patterns and she has helped in locating these important sewing aids in an area that is most convenient for customers.

The new Gold's Fabrics Ltd. in downtown Portland is located in a landmark building which has been associated with fine fashion for many years. It will be renovated to include five floors of retail shops and restaurants with an international flavor. The complex has been named Continental Crossroads and the target date for the opening has been set for early 1981. Gold's Fabrics presently occupies the main floor with fashion fabrics and the third floor with the home decorating department. It has been open since the first of April of his year and it has already become a headquarters for discriminating home sewers.

Radioactivity tester

OTTAWA (CP) — The energy department Tuesday unveiled a new device today to detect underground radioactivity accurately in about an hour.

Current methods take about 24 hours.

The device, a meter, looks something like a computerized orange bread-box. It can analyse and give a detailed count on a miniature keyboard of natural radon and thoron daughters — the products created by the radioactive radon and thoron gases. These may be be found in uranium mines or other contaminated areas.

Inventor Don Cameron, a technologist with the department's radiation mineral physics laboratories, began work on the device about three years ago.

Officials hope to see the first 50 machines, manufactured in Ottawa by Pylon Electronic Development Co. Ltd., by the end of the summer. Company spokesmen said at a news conference that the meter, named the Pylon WL-1000, also appears to be an attractive possibility for export.

'Stop all hunting of Alta. caribou'

CALGARY (CP) — Nothing short of a total ban on caribou hunting is going to save the rapidly dwindling herds, say Alberta hunters and conservationists.

This year the provincial government plans to restrict hunting in October to the Hinton-Edson area, one of five regions where caribou herds are found in Alberta.

But the 25,000-member Alberta Fish and Game Association says that's not good enough.

"We have asked the government for a total closure on caribou hunting, says association president Don Hayden.

The province still refuses to consider a moratorium on hunting, along with "unnecessary industrial activity" to find out why the caribou is dying off.

"We support the closure until a proper caribou management plan is drawn up," says Diane Pachal, a co-ordinator for the Alberta Wilderness Association and several other provincial conservation groups.

A fish and wildlife department study estimated that the caribou population has seriously decreased in the last 15 years, dropping to between 1,500 and 3,500. In 1966, the population was estimated at almost 10,000.

Last October, hunters shot only 11 caribou but most of them were breeding bulls, which are already endangered because of sharply declining numbers.

It is the second year in a row that the province has refused a total hunting ban on caribou as recommended by an internal fish and wildlife department report.

Fish and game members said a government decision on a ban has been based on "political" pressures rather than from recommendations of the fish and wildlife department.

Turn those motors off!

MONTREAL (CP) — "Whoops, I forgot the bread."

Joseph M. was supposed to pick up a loaf of bread on the way home. He came out of the grocery store with milk, butter, melba toast, marmalade and cigarettes. He ducked back into the store without bothering to turn his motor off.

Michel F. is 16. The powerful sports car had caught his attention. He came up closer to admire it. One day, perhaps, he'd have one like it.

The teenager was watching when Joseph M. went back to the store.

A few second later, Joseph M. saw a car identical to his leaving the parking lot. "In an unknown direction," noted the police radio a little later.

The rest of the story followed a script acted out thousands of times a year in the streets of North American cities. Joseph M. was luckier than many — police found his car intact two days later.

Joy-riding

Michel F. had driven around until the gas ran out. And fortunately he'd had no accidents.

This form of theft, known as "joy-riding," is the most common in Montreal and most other large North American cities.

Det.-Capt. Raymond Bourbonnais, head of the vehicle theft squad of the Montreal Urban Community police, says joy-riding accounts for about half of reported auto thefts.

"Car 'borrowers' are often youths who just want to ride around or impress their friends when they arrive at a party," he says.

Bourbonnais says young thieves usually choose automobiles whose workings they know. Vehicles are often damaged, however, through inexperience or nervousness on the part of the impromptu driver.

Police have great difficulty solving these "loans" because of their short duration.

Finding most joy-riders would require what police authorities consider a disproportionate effort, at the expense of more important police work.

Police have little sympathy for people who leave their keys in the car in public places. The crestfallen motorist reporting to police will not readily admit to leaving his motor running "while going in for a newspaper," or to leaving his keys in the car.

In other cases, theft of a car is only a step in the commission of another crime, perhaps a kidnapping or an armed robbery. The vehicle is used for the initial getaway and is abandoned a few blocks from the scene of the misdeed.

Automobiles are also stolen for parts, which are stripped for sale or use on another car. In still other cases the target is the contents of a vehicle. Huge vans loaded with expensive merchandise will disappear, to be found empty a few days later.

"Last June we redefined the role of the vehicle theft squad," Det.-Capt. Bourbonnais says. "We are concentrating on professional thieves who work in a ring, often supported by organized crime."

This sophisticated class of theft has become a full-fledged industry, recruiting highly skilled personnel. Automobiles are stolen by the dozen for facelifting and resale.

Specialists

A well-organized ring has teams of specialists. "Observers" are responsible for spotting vehicles the ring can use. The theft itself is carried out by a "jockey," often teamed with a locksmith equipped with skeleton keys, lock picks and a portable drill.

Such experts make short work of the steering-wheel lock now found on most cars. In a few seconds they can remove the cylinder of an ignition lock, install a new one and start a car that was carefully locked by its owner.

Facelifting often involves resuscitating a car headed for the scrap heap — the classic "total loss" ploy. A car involved in an accident, normally a write-off, is acquired by a ring member who claims he wants to fix it up.

He is really after the car's registration papers, licence plates and the model and serial numbers stamped on its body. These are carefully removed and installed on a stolen car of identical model.

The car's appearance is further disguised by repainting, and sometimes by the addition of a vinyl roof, outside rear-view mirror or other accessories. Thus "repaired," the "total loss" can be sold for a good price, with lawful paperwork.

In other cases, counterfeit documents are used to give a stolen vehicle a new identity. The counterfeiters use blank registration papers or transfer forms, also stolen, filling them in with the details of the stolen automobile they want to sell.

The Quebec Motor Vehicle Bureau will catch up with this gambit sooner or later. This may leave a new "owner" wishing he had refused the good deal he was offered by a stranger in a tavern.

The 13 investigators in the vehicle-theft squad are just as specialized as the criminals they're after.

"We're in constant contact with the auto makers, the insurance companies, the Quebec Motor Vehicle Bureau, the Canadian Auto Theft Bureau and the (U.S.) National Auto Theft Bureau," Bourbonnais says.

The chances of preventing an auto theft or of finding a stolen vehicle depend greatly on the care taken by owners, police say.

"Stack the odds in your favor," is their advice.

— Take the ignition keys with you;

— Make sure the steering wheel is locked;

— Lock the doors;

— Take the papers with you (driver's licence, registration, proof of insurance);

— Don't leave valuable objects in sight of passers-by.

Police also encourage motorists to install alarm systems, on grounds that they complicate things for casual thieves and give professionals cause to hesitate.

Aurora anti-sub aircraft for delivery this week

Four of the 18 to be stationed at CFB Comox

By STEPHEN SCOTT

OTTAWA (CP) — The Aurora long-range patrol aircraft, one of the most expensive and controversial military purchases in Canadian peacetime history, soon will be guarding the nation's sovereignty.

The first of the 18 Lockheed aircraft that will cost a total of more than $1 billion will be delivered with appropriate ceremony at Greenwood, N.S., air base Thursday after undergoing a year of flight testing.

The other 17 made-for-Canada versions of the Orion four-engine, turbo-prop patrol plane will fly in from Burbank, Calif., between now and the fall of 1981.

Four will operate out of Comox, and the rest out of Greenwood.

Canadian Armed Forces experts say the plane, modified to their specifications, is the best anti-submarine aircraft in the world.

The aircraft will gradually replace the 26 ancient propeller-driven Argus planes that have been doing the bulk of Canada's coastal and northern sovereignty air patrol work since 1957.

The armed forces said the Auroras will arrive on schedule and on budget. The aircraft were bought for $1.01 billion in 1975 dollars.

An armed forces spokesman said Monday the final cost will be much more than that — taking into account everything from inflation to the falling Canadian dollar — but no more than originally expected. However, the final figure was not immediately available.

The aircraft will patrol far out into the Atlantic on NATO surveillance assignments, fly north to show the Canadian flag over the barren Arctic islands, patrol the Pacific coast and do such odd jobs as watching foreign fishing operations in Canadian waters and reporting on icebergs.

New patrol plane leaves Lockheed hangar in Burbank last year for test flights

The basic Orion aircraft is used by the United States Navy and a host of other countries for patrol work.

In 1974-75, its proposed purchase resulted in rowdy Commons debates and bickering between two Liberal cabinet ministers — at a time when the American Lockheed company was involved in payoff scandals and financial difficulties.

It appeared at one stage that a contract was ready for signing, approved by then-defence minister James Richardson. But then-supply minister Jean-Pierre Goyer vetoed that deal and it was months of controversy before Lockheed got the final go-ahead to build the plane.

Goyer also got into a libel suit over remarks he made about the way one of his civil servants was handling the Lockheed contract.

At the time, it was the most expensive peacetime military purchase in Canadian history. But that has been eclipsed by the decision earlier this year to purchase the multi-billion-dollar MacDonnell Douglas F-18A fighter plane.

The contract with Lockheed allows for cost increases because of inflation of up to nine per cent in 1977 and seven per cent in succeeding years.

On top of that, Treasury Board President Donald Johnston said in the Commons recently there was a $96.7-million cost overrun on the Aurora program. The armed forces spokesman said that was caused by the fall in the value of the Canadian dollar, not because the aircraft is costing more than anticipated.

The contract with Lockheed provided that Canadian industry get $585 million in business. On top of that, Lockheed would use its best efforts to provide additional millions.

Figures released last November said 100 Canadian companies had been awarded contracts worth $310 million U.S. Of that, $150 million had gone to Ontario, although in time the figure would climb to $250 million.

More than 2,600 jobs had been created.

The Argus aircraft will be turned over to War Assets Disposal Corp. to be sold.

Oil from coal viable idea, experts say

By GARRY FAIRBAIRN

CALGARY (CP) — A group of petroleum scientists has concluded that Alberta's coal supplies can be turned into 10.5 billion barrels of oil, 1½ times as much as all of Canada's current proved reserves of conventional oil.

In a paper presented this week to the petroleum society of the Canadian Institute of Mines and Metallurgy, the scientists said coal liquefaction also offers significant economic and environmental benefits in addition to increased oil supplies.

The research team, headed by project manager R. W. Gregory of Algas Resources Ltd., estimated that 7.1 billion tonnes of open-pit sub-bituminous coal remain in Alberta, with 4.6 billion tonnes of that being economically recoverable.

Each tonne of such coal could be processed into 2.3 barrels of liquid hydrocarbons, they said.

"The potential liquid fuel content of Alberta's coal reserves is comparable to that derived from the oil sands and heavy oils."

Technology was considered no problem. The researchers noted that wartime Germany obtained all its aviation fuel from 85,000 barrels of oil produced each day from coal.

Calling for expansion of Canadian research efforts in coal liquefaction, they said the major remaining drawback to adopting the process on a large scale is economic.

Their preliminary studies indicated that a 140,000-barrel-a-day liquefaction plant would have a capital cost of $4.7 billion compared with $4.9 billion for a surface-mining operation in the oil sands and $7-billion for steam-injection recovery of extremely heavy oil.

But the liquefaction operation would carry operating costs of $800 million a year due to the need to buy coal and natual gas as feedstock. Annual operating costs would be $330 million for the oil-sands plant and $350 million for the heavy-oil operation, all amounts expressed in 1980 dollars.

Nevertheless, they said, Canada will need other sources of oil in addition to the sands and heavy-oil prjects that c3n be launched in the next 10 years.

If coal liquefaction is one of those sources, they contended, Alberta would gain several benefits:

— Less energy would be consumed in mining coal than in mining oil sands. Half a tonne of coal would yield slightly more than one barrel of oil, while 2.3 tonnes of oil sands have to be mined and processed to produce a barrel of oil.

— Coal liquefaction would consume only 3.1 barrels of water per barrel of product, compared with 4.2 for the steam-injection process and a range of 4.6 to 10.4 for oil-sands mining and processing.

— The oil from plains coal would be particularly high in substances desired by petrochemical refineries, making that oil more valuable than the synthetic crude oil being produced from oil sands.

— Sulphur dioxide emissions from a liquefaction plant would be less than from the other two options.

Writing trade not profitable

TORONTO (CP) — Results from Statistics Canada's first survey of writers' earnings are enough to make ambitious parents discourage their children from becoming scribes.

The federal agency sent a detailed questionnaire to 1,000 of the estimated 3,000 professional writers in Canada last year, asking them to state their annual income.

A detailed analysis won't be ready until this fall, but the preliminary report provides a doleful preview.

About 300 of those surveyed qualified as full-time writers which, under the Statistics Canada definition, means they devoted 30 hours or more a week to writing and related activities.

The largest group of full-time writers, 43 per cent, said they earned less than $5,000 from writing in 1978. About 25 per cent of the full-time writers said they made more than $20,000. The other 32 per cent were spread out between $5,000 and $20,000.

The median income from all forms of writing for the group was $7,000 before taxes.

The median income from books, $1,050, was also low.

About a third of the full-time writers had other jobs to supplement their income, a fact reflected in the statistics for income from all sources.

Rain too little, too late for prairies?

The Canadian Press

The threat of drought has been temporarily washed away by rain in most parts of Alberta but is as strong as ever in Saskatchewan and Manitoba.

Clouds bringing relief to Alberta farmers and cattlemen in the last few days only flirted with other parts of the Prairies, sprinkling a little rain here and there as they rolled east.

"It will wet the surface and keep the dust down for a couple of days," said Al Martin head of the crops branch of the Manitoba agriculture department. "But we need a soaker almost immediately, something that will last two or three days just to get the surface back into shape."

"No place in Saskatchewan really had enough," said Henry Zilm of Regina, director of the Saskatchewan department of agriculture's statistical branch. "I think anything less than half an inch is totally useless, (and) it is doubtful anything less than an inch will do any good."

A Winnipeg weather office official said in the last 48 hours southern parts of Alberta received up to 50 millimetres of rain and from 10 to 15 milimetres fell around Edmonton.

The rain poked into sections of northern Saskatchwan with about 10 millimetres but southern areas received much less.

A boisterous display of thunder and lightning over southern Manitoba on Sunday night shook loose only a little rain.

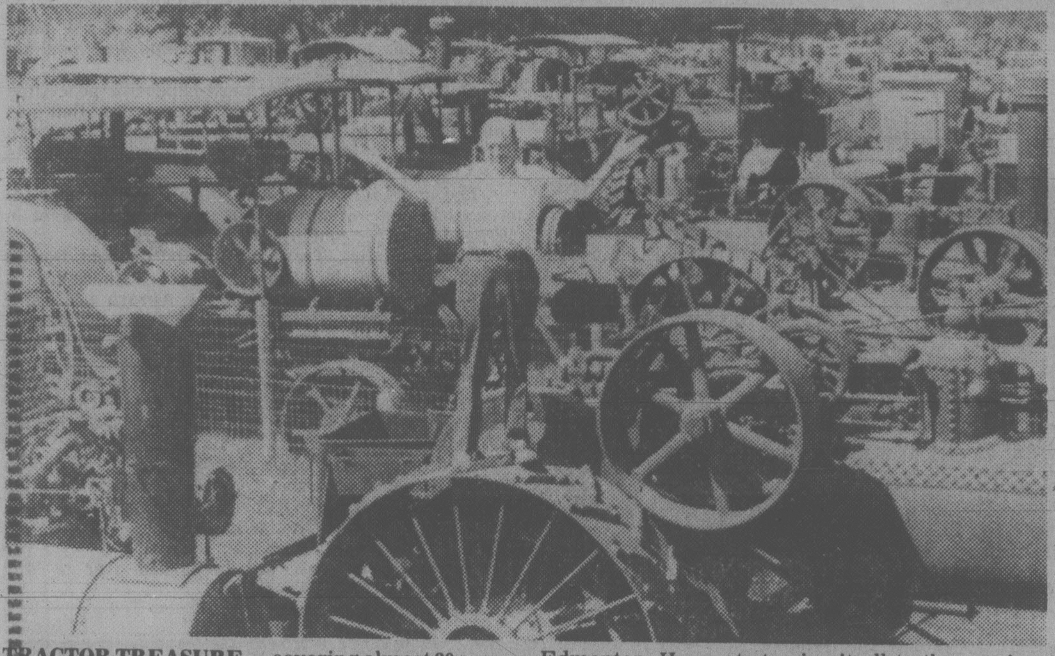
"We're getting up to two months now without appreciable rain," said Zilm. "This past week has been extremely hot and I think reports of crop damage will soon be coming in."

High winds have complicated the problem, sending up huge clouds of topsoil that almost obscured Regina on Sunday afternoon. Wind-blown dirt in some areas is shearing young plants off at ground level.

"I don't think the crop is lost by any means," said Zilm. "But certainly it's under a great deal of stress and we'll need rain very soon."

Cattlemen are in an even more tenuous position because their pastures have literally dried up and little supplemental feed is available.

Provincial governments are implementing feed assistance programs to help their beef and milk producers but it is only a stop-gap measure and won't prevent distress selling if the drought continues.



TRACTOR TREASURE — covering almost 20 acres — is Stan Reynolds pride and joy at his old machinery museum at Wetaskiwin, 50 km south of Edmonton. He wants to give it all to the province free for a provincial transportation museum, but the government has yet to decide if it will accept.

Safeway accused of hogging sales

EDMONTON (CP) — A small farm organization has called for legislation to restrict construction of new Canada Safeway stores in Edmonton and Calgary.

The Christian Farmers Federation of Western Canada says in a brief to the hog marketing review committee that previous legislation restricting new Safeway stores should be re-implemented by the province.

"One retailer (Safeway) controls the majority of supermarket sales in this province," the report says.

Helmets for young cowboys?

EDMONTON (CP) — The death of 14-year-old Jessie Hyland during a weekend rodeo at Barrhead, about 80 kilometres northwest of Edmonton, may prompt members of the Foothills Cowboy Association to look into protective headgear for young cowboys.

The steer he was riding turned while coming out of the chute and slammed the boy's head into a steel pole.

Dry spring hits duck breeding

PORTAGE LA PRAIRIE, Man. (CP) — Duck reproduction may be reduced by as much as 50 per cent because of the driest spring since 1882, Bruce Batt, assistant director of the Delta Waterfowl Research Station, said.

Wayne elevators, houses gutted

WAYNE, Alta. (CP) — Two elevators and as many as eight houses were destroyed by fire in the south-central Alberta town of Wayne, near Drumheller, Tuesday.

Proposition 13 Manitoba-style

ELIE, MAN.(CP) — More than 250 angry ratepayers have called for their own brand of Proposition 13 — the name given to the revolt of California taxpayers that resulted in a $7 million property tax cut.

Whitehorse School Division ratepayers have demanded that school taxes be slashed or held to a minimum in the future.

Naked male contest delay

EDMONTON (CP) — Edmonton will have to keep waiting for its first naked male beauty contest.

Myrna Greene, organizer of Mr. Nude Edmonton, says a visit by Alberta liquor control board inspectors prompted one of the owners to quit.

The owner said he rejected the event because Mr. Nude Edmonton and the Capilano Motor Inn's wedding reception business would have been too much of an odd couple.

Mrs. Greene said no one complained about her previous Miss Nude Edmonton contests held in the same hotel.

Some drawbacks noted despite ling's taste

EDMONTON (CP) — Ling lack scales. This is not their only drawback.

They have "highly acceptable white flesh" but fail in other ways, said a report presented to the Alberta legislature.

Ling, also known as turbot or freshwater cod, are one of the underused species of fish in the province. A legislative committee on commercial and recreational fishing suggested such species could be exploited better in the marketplace.

"The major problems (with ling) are the small amount of meat, the work it takes to fillet the fish and their lack of scales," the report said.

The lack of scales makes them unacceptable for processing as kosher food, cutting ling off from the relatively large Jewish market.

Suckers also fail commercially.

Also known as mullet, they were put up for sale experimentally in Winnipeg.

"The greyish flesh could not successfully compete with the white fleshed marine products," the report said.

"Alberta's mink farmers used to purchase large amounts of tullibee and suckers; however, a chemical in the latter fish caused the slippage of mink hairs and the suckers had to be boiled before being fed to the mink."

Now mink farming has declined too, shrinking even that market.

Abandoned rail lines breaking farmers' hearts

By ROD EDWARDS

RIDING MOUNTAIN, Man. (CP) — The tears that welled up in Gilbert Allan's old eyes could have been blamed on the strong wind if it hadn't been for the men nearby who were noisily ripping out part of his life.

"What the hell can you do about it?" said Allan in a burst of anger and frustration as work crews tore up a railway branchline that had been the road to market for his grain and his father's before him.

"You can fight it if you like. It's just another thing pushed down your neck."

Most Canadians would find it hard to understand the emotional attachment farmers like Allan feel for the cold steel of a railway. They haven't lived all their lives on a line that led to the creation of many farm communities, then gave them a sense of security and involvement in the future.

"It's what built these small towns," said Allan who farmed for 47 years on the Neepawa subdivision in west-central Manitoba but now only helps out during harvest.

"They could become ghost towns now."

The Canadian National Railways branchline runs 53 kilometres north from Neepawa through Eden, Birnie, Riding Mountain, Kelwood and Norgate, ending at McCreary which is served by another CN line.

It is one of hundreds of railway capillaries that spread out from arterial routes in the giant Prairie grain marketing system.

Over the years many have been allowed to deteriorate because, say the railways and grain companies, they didn't generate enough grain traffic to justify their existence.

Once the business losses were proven, and unless serious social disruption was indicated, the lines were given the death sentence by such federal bodies as the Hall Commission and Canadian Transport Commission.

Economic considerations aside, abandonment has meant a longer drive for farmers to sell their grain at alternate points, a loss of railway tax revenues to the municipalities and the disappearance of the local elevator and the men who ran it.

To older farmers, the ringing finality of rails being tossed in the ditch is an emotional experience.

"It's hard to describe," said George Carr, a semi-retired farmer living in Kelwood.

"It's just a feeling of nostalgia. I see the tracks there growing over with grass and everything, the elevators not used. It's just a terrible feeling."

Farmers in neighboring areas feel just as protective and don't always appreciate those who use their facilities as alternate delivery points.

The conflict boiled over last fall when farmers from the Neepawa subdivision tried to meet delivery quotas at alternate elevators that for years have had their own regular customers.

The situation prompted one grain company official to refer to the Neepawa farmers as the boat people.

Carr said the extra hauling distances last year cost him $600 for custom trucking because his old vehicle, that served him well over short hauls, couldn't survive the longer trips.

"I priced a new truck and it would cost me $30,000. I'm not going to be farming that much longer to justify the expense."

Similar problems arose on another abandoned CN line further west. The 118-km stretch from Rapid City to Beulah was scrapped in 1978 and many farmers blamed Manitoba Pool Elevators for not fighting to keep the line.

Harvey English, 62, of the Cardale district, a municipal councillor and former Pool delegate until he resigned in disgust, laid the blame for abandonment directly at the feet of the farmer-owned co-operative.

He also questioned the competence of the Hall Commission hearings which, he said, were to deal with the rail needs of communities and the burdens that would be faced by farmers.

"It's now coming home to the people who are bearing these burdens; the high cost of transporting their grain, loss of taxation to municipalities and damage to roads."

Area farmers have doubled their hauling distances in trucks that get from three to five miles to the gallon. The average round-trip now is 48 km. English said the extra cost amounts to 10 cents a bushel and could go higher as fuel costs rise.

"We realized a long time ago that even if the railways had to go back to coal they could move our grain a lot cheaper than we could maintain roads and haul by truck."

Rocket fizzles

OTTAWA (CP) — Canadian scientists have lost a free space ticket and a $400,000 deposit on their share of a research satellite that landed unexpectedly in the Atlantic Ocean.

Brian Whalen of the National Research Council's astrophysics laboratories said Tuesday that a European rocket carrying the Firewheel satellite splashed down shortly after blast-off Friday from Kourou, French Guiana.

The $22 million Ariane booster-rocket was the second of two European rockets to fail in recent years. Ariane was built to replace the ill-fated Europa which plunged into the sea minutes after launching in 1975.

Also lost was Firewheel, a multi-million international space project designed to study the earth's energy field.

Pension hike still leaves aged poor

OTTAWA (CP) — The government admitted Tuesday thousands of pensioners will be left below the poverty line despite a $35-a-month increase in their guaranteed income supplement.

Spokesmen for all parties described the increase — which received final approval Tuesday in the Commons — as a welcome interim measure.

But they criticized the government for not taking immediate steps to raise the income for all pensioners to the poverty line or better.

"No, it's not enough," Health Minister Monique Begin readily admitted in the Commons. "But we're going to continue to do more."

The bill, which results from a major Liberal election promise, is the first piece of original legilation the new government has managed to steer through all stages in the Commons.

It raises to $188 a month the current $153 supplement received by single pensioners who have little or no income from othec sources.

Pensioner couples getting the supplement each will receive an additional $17.50, increasing each partner's cheque to $145 a month.

The supplement is paid in addition to the basic old age security pension for persons 65 years and older, which now stands at $186.80 a month.

Miss Begin told the Commons an estimated 1.3 million pensioners will benefit from the legislation. The increase will show on their July cheques.

Opposition MPs labelled the raise a pittance and veteran New Democrat Stanley Knowles, an ardent campaigner for improved old age security, said the government should provide pensions that are at least 25 per cent above the poverty line.

Miss Begin said that as soon as the Canadian conomy recovers, she will press her cabinet colleagues to free an additional $750 million so all pensioners can at least live at the poverty level.

The minister said the $35-a-month increase will provide single pensioners with an annual income of at least $4,500 a and will bring those people to within 83 per cent of the poverty line.

Pensioner couples will have an annual income of $8,162 with the increase, about three per cent above the poverty line listed by Statistics Canada for married couples, she said.

Tough new law hits at hookers

MONTREAL (CP) — Armed with a tough, new bylaw designed to curb soliciting, police are preparing to crack down on the 300 prostitutes estimated to be plying their trade on Montreal's downtown streets.

"We'll be making our presence felt with the weight of the new law," Yvon De Grace, commander of Montreal's 45-member vice squad, said Tuesday.

The bylaw, passed by council Monday, makes it illegal for anyone to remain in a public place for the purposes of soliciting. Police are confident it will allow them to make a dramatic improvement on the 66 prostitution arrests they made last year.

The inspiration for Montreal's bylaw comes indirectly from former Conservative justice minister Jacques Flynn, who rejected appeals from police departments to tighten the prostitution provisions in the Criinal Code, suggesting instead that municipalities pass their ownn laws.

De Grace said he favors a slow, concerted anti-prostitution effort rather than a flashy crackdown.

The new bylaw provides for fines of up to $1,000 for a repeated offence. The vice chief said the old fines, usually between $50 and $100, were laughed off by prostitutes charging anywhere from $30 to $70 a transaction.

Toddler terrorists a devastating duo

PICKERING, Ont. (CP) — Two tots armed with a small hatchet and a lot of enthusiasm went on a rampage Monday causing $600 damage to a car and house.

The devasting duo — aged three and five — took their little axe to the windshield of a car and then flattened the front tire.

Just getting warmed up, the pair then smashed the rear window of a nearby house, crawled in, and did some redecorating.

They whacked a stereo, hit the phone, overturned plants, smashed a wall socket, damaged a chair, chipped a table and — for the encore — poured juice into an acoustic guitar.

Crime reporting bill shot down

OTTAWA (CP) — Blaming the media for ruining the reputation of innocent people, a Progressive Conservative MP called in the Commons Tuesday for a ban on the publication or broadcast of the names of people involved in criminal proceedings until they are proven guilty.

However, Paul Dick, MP for Lanark-Renfrew-Carleton riding near Ottawa, was unsuccessful in his attempt to get approval for such a bill.

Under the bill, it would be illegal to publish the names of people charged with a crime before or during a trial or after an acquittal.

Portillo, Trudeau announce trade pact

OTTAWA (CP) — Mexican President Jose Lopez Portillo's visit here has not been as successful as Canadian officials hoped it would be.

Prime Minister Trudeau told Opposition Leader Joe Clark in the Commons Tuesday an energy and industrial co-operation agreement the two states signed earlier in the day, which commits Mexico to supply Canada with 50,000 barrels of oil a day, beginning later this year, could have been better.

Flora MacDonald, the former Progressive Conservative external affairs minister, also suggested the oil deal could have been improved and said the new deliveries will not offset cuts in Venezuelan shipments from 240,000 barrels a day to 150,000.

The agreement commits Mexico to deliver the oil, beginning gradually in October and hitting the 50,000-barrel-a-day level by December, in return for extensive co-operation in the development of Mexican industry and agriculture.

"It is not as satisfactory as the one that had been initialled last year," Trudeau said, referring to a May, 1979, document that called for initial deliveries of 50,000 barrels a day, followed by an eventual flow of 100,000 barrels daily.

Mexico notified Canada two weeks ago it wanted to revise the section referring to the increased oil flow. Canadian officials had been looking forward to the signing of that agreement to lessen the country's dependence on oil from the unstable Middle East.

Although External Affairs Minister Mark MacGuigan told reporters at the time he was optimistic the problem could be worked out, Mexican officials refused to budge from a previously stated commitment to supply Canada with 50,000 barrels a day.

Lopez Portillo told a news conference Tuesday his country cannot supply more because it would interfere with its carefully-controlled industrial development plans.

"That's as far as we can go," he said. "We are being quite cautious in our commitments."

Current projections call for Mexico to raise, then limit, production to between 2.2 million and 2.5 million barrels a day. Half of that will be exported.

Last month, Mexico produced an average of 1.8 million barrels a day and exported about 850,000 of them. The current Mexican export price for light Isthmus-grade oil is $33.50 a barrel. Heavy Maya-grade crude sells for $28.

The lid was slapped on to control a 20-per-cent inflation rate. But the increased revenues will pay for the ambitious industrial modernization plan and create about 25 million new jobs by 1990.

But while Lopez Portillo would not commit his eventual successor to increased oil exports to Canada when his term of office expires in 1982 and would not commit Mexico to helping Canada through any potential oil shortage, he did not rule them out.

"I don't think we should cross our bridges before we get to them," he told reporters.

Mexico plans to swap its oil — proven reserves are estimated at 50 billion barrels while potential reserves are estimated at 150 billion barrels — for advanced industrial, agricultural and communications technology.

Lopez Portillo got a glimpse of the technological future Tuesday afternoon when he visited Bell-Northern Reseach Ltd.'s sophisticated laboratories here.

Company officials showed him silicon chips and microcircuits — both designed by and used in computers and other advanced gear — they said were "three years ahead of anything else on the market."

He also toured the company's sterilized rooms where capped and gowned women produce the tiny brains for computers and their electronic cousins.

Northern Telecom, one of the company's corporate parents, is trying to negotiate several multi-million-dollar contracts with Grupo Alpha, Mexico's largest industrial conglomerate.

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau indicated Tuesday that all premiers, except Quebec's, have agreed to attend a meeting here June 9 to begin discussions on constitutional change.

However, a spokesman for Claude Morin, Quebec intergovernmental affairs minister, said a few hours later that the federal government has not yet invited Quebec to attend such a meeting.

"There have been no communications on either a ministerial level or between public servants, the spokesman said in an interview.

Trudeau appeared to give a different interpretation of events in the Commons during a reply to a question by Lorne Nystrom, New Democratic Party federal-provincial relations critic.

Trudeau told him: "We have not yet, as of this moment, heard a response from the 10th province, which has not yet indicated, . . . up to now, the understanding it would be present at that date."

Huge manhunt for tot's killer

TORONTO (CP) — Hundreds of calls from residents of Toronto's east end have provided police with leads in the pursuit of the killer of Elizabeth Jean Tomlinson.

Inspector James Crawford said Tuesday more than 100 police officers were "tearing apart" the neighborhood from which the six-year-old girl disappeared Saturday afternoon.

An autopsy performed Monday night revealed the little girl, known around the neighborhood as Lizzie, had been sexually assaulted before she was strangled in a thicket just west of the Don River.

"We've done a lot more extensive interviews with people and come up with better, more accurate descriptions," Crawford said.

Police believe the man is between 25 and 30 years old. His height is five-foot-seven to five-foot-10 and his weight is between 160 and 180 pounds.

Tensions are running high over the case. Last night, as police bundled a man, who had threatened to kill himself, into a cruiser a crowd screamed for blood under the mistaken impression he was the killer of six-year-old Elizabeth Jean.

The incident occurred minutes after the man, armed with a rifle and holed up in an apartment above a store, said he would kill anyone who tried to stop him.

As an emergency task force led him away, the crowd cheered and a few people shouted: "Kill him! Kill him!"

Hospitals crippled by strike

WINNIPEG (CP) — Union members in eight more Manitoba communities walked off their jobs at hospitals and nursing homes today, joining a legal strike started Tuesday by non-medical support staff in Winnipeg and eight other municipalities.

Today's action brings the total of Canadian Union of Public Employees members on strike to about 2,600. The largest contingent includes about 1,800 workers from Winnipeg's Health Sciences Centre and the Cancer Foundation.

Union spokesman Eugene Kostyra said CUPE wants to continue negotiations with the Health Sciences Centre and Manitoba Health Organizations Inc. which represents the rest of the strike-bound facilities.

Home-repair loans another Catch-22?

OTTAWA (CP) — The federal government has built "blatant disincentives" into its program to assist in repairs to older homes, New Democratic Party housing critic Margaret Mitchell said Tuesday.

Ms. Mitchell told the Commons that the high interest rates on home-repair loans, the income requirements for applicants and the use of designated areas all seem to be an effort to keep people from making use of the program.

Some 200,000 families, including 1,000 "hardship cases" in the Vancouver area, have an urgent need for help, yet the government has not even spent all the money it has available for the program, she added.

Housing Minister Paul Cosgrove said the government wants to see greater use of the program.

"It is a valuable program," he said. "It's been encouraged and supported, and I intend to support it in the future."

Cosgrove said the government has gradually raised the number of homes that qualify for assistance, but it lacks the funds to make thousands of additional homes eligible.

The program, operated by Canada Mortgage and Housing Corp., provides loans for the repair of substandard houses for homeowners and for landlords who agree to federal rent controls.

Individual families can qualify for assistance of up to $10,000 if their family income does not exceed $11,000.

The funds were originally intended to be available only in designated areas, but the program was expanded to apply to other areas under amendments to the National Housing Act last spring.

However, Cosgrove's predecessor Elmer MacKay advised provincial housing ministers last fall that Ottawa lacked the funds to make the program "universal in practice."

In a news release Tuesday, Ms. Mitchell, MP for Vancouver East, said few homeowners except single senior citizens are able to qualify for help.

She said the income guides for the program haven't been changed since 1974 and the interest rate on loans was raised two years ago from eight per cent to a prohibitive 14½ per cent.

Ontario blaze grows, but rest abate

KENORA, Ont. (CP) — Dense smoke prevented fire fighters today from determining the northern boundaries of a giant forest fire called Kenora 23 burning near this northwestern Ontario town.

But officials increased their estimate of the area of the fire, setting it at about 300,000 acres (121,000 hectares). Planes equipped with infra-red scanners will fly over the fire's head later to determine where the fire has advanced.

Moderate winds continued to blow from the south-southeast, meaning the fire was advancing in a northeasterly direction away from any settled areas.

Ontario natural resources officials have established a command post in McIntosh, about 60 kilometres northwest of Dryden, to deal with it.

The fire had burned to within eight kilometres south of the evacuated Indian community of Grassy Narrows, 60 kilometres northeast of Kenora, before twisting away.

Although police raised residents' hopes by opening a 90-kilometre stretch of the Trans-Canada Highway from Kenora to Vermilion Bay, they warned it could be closed again if the fires spread.

Although there were no new evacuations, Bill Lanning, an Ontario natural resources ministry official, said any shift in the wind could blow the fire toward Kenora.

Schools in the Kenora district remained closed Tuesday for the second day as part of the town's tentative evacuation plan so that children would be with their families.

About 6,000 people have been evacuated in northwestern Ontario, but there have been no deaths in what ministry officials call the worst forest fires in 40 years.

In Manitoba, meanwhile, forest fires are generally under control in the Porcupine Mountain Provincial Forest, the current focus of Manitoba firefighting efforts.

None of the small communities along its edge is in any immediate danger, an Emergency Measures Organization official said Tuesday night.

Thundershowers are anticipated tonight in the forest where firefighters from Manitoba and Saskatchewan have been building fire guards in recent days.

Manitoba government officials, who earlier said about 250,000 acres (101,172 hectares) were burned in the provincial forest, have revised their estimate to between 190,000 and 200,000 acres.

But fires are continuing to give trouble in Birch River Canyon, in the southern half of the provincial forest, and at Steep Rock Lake in the northern half.

At Whitefish Lake, which straddles the Manitoba-Saskatchewan border near the southern edge of the park, the situation has improved considerably. Firefighting officials are hopeful the fire there can be knocked out soon.

In Alberta, all fire and travel restrictions ordered because of extreme forest fire hazards have been removed, the provincial forest service has announced.

"Sufficient rain has fallen in all parts of Alberta to minimize the danger of man-caused fire starts and, therefore, restrictions are no longer required," the service said in a news release.

In the Northwest Territories, cool weather and steady rainfall have doused a forest fire that threatened to spread into Nahanni National Park.

A reconnaissance flight over a remote region in the southwest corner of the territory found that the fire had stopped about 25 kilometres south of the park.

A government official said the fire destroyed about 900 acres (364 hectares) of timber. The burned area would be scanned for "hot spots," which could cause other fires.

Lalonde set to battle Alberta

OTTAWA (CP) — Energy Minister Marc Lalonde left no doubt Tuesday night that Alberta is in for a tough round of oil price bargaining.

In a speech prepared for delivery to the Canadian Manufacturers Association, he flatly rejected the idea of "economic sovereignty with political association."

Lalonde also gave a strong indication the federal government will impose a tax on all petroleum products as part of its proposed new energy pricing scheme.

Lalonde said the blended, made-in-Canada price for oil proposed by the Liberals during the Feb. 18 election campaign will be an extension of the system adopted several years ago to permit two oil sands plants in Alberta to get world prices for their output of "synthetic" crude oil.

Under that plan, the federal government uses a special levy on all petroleum products to make up the difference between the current Canadian price of $14.75 a barrel and the world price of about $36, he explained.

The statement was the clearest indication to date of plans for a so-called refinery gate levy on oil products. In the past, government spokesmen have said only that such a levy is one of the options being studied.

The blended system proposed by the Liberals would be a uniform price to consumers that takes into account the different costs of producing or obtaining oil from conventional wells, the oil sands, frontier and offshore wells and imports.

Talks with Alberta and the other producing provinces on a new pricing agreement for oil and natural gas are scheduled to resume next month.

Lalonde made it clear that prices have to go up, but not as much as the producing provinces would like, because of the exceptional importance of energy to the Canadian economy.

"We have to assess the loss to producing provinces from holding oil and gas prices down against the losses from higher inflation, less production and fewer jobs resulting from unrestrained prices.

"We have to balance constitutional rights and moral rights of equity, economic profits and political costs.

"We have to decide not only if we'll disown Confederation, but whether we ourselves will be modern fathers of Confederation."

Lalonde confirmed that a blended price would gradually see the end of oil import subsidies for Eastern Canada that now amount to about $21 a barrel on imported oil.

"We won't cut this subsidy all at once — the blended price would rise too quickly — but as we phase it out, the burden of cost will gradually shift to the user."

The minister refused to say how high prices could go during the next few years. But he repeated earlier promises that the price of Canadian oil will not rise more than $4 a barrel this year and that the excise tax increase of four cents a litre (18 cents a gallon) proposed by the former Progressive Conservative government will not be reintroduced.

Lalonde said a host of federal programs have helped Western Canada over the years and in fact ensured the development of the Alberta oil industry at a time when world markets were glutted with cheaper petroleum from the Middle East.

The minister suggested the issues raised by continuing federal-provincial differences on energy policy are every bit as divisive as the issues raised by the Quebec referendum.

"We defeated those who wanted political sovereignty with economic association. We did not carry out this difficult battle to get economic sovereignty with political association."

Opening lead — five of clubs.

When a slam is bid, the difference between making and losing it ordinarily ranges from 1,000 to 1,800 points, depending mostly on vulnerability. Slams are therefore naturally deemed worthy of the closest attention by both sides.

Consistent with the importance of slam hands, there are several special defensive weapons that help to increase the chance of defeating an enemy slam when it is bid. Thus, when a defender not on lead doubles a slam voluntarily reached by the opposition, he is commanding partner to lead, or sometimes not to lead, a specific suit.

The advantage of this convention is clearly illustrated in the accompanying hand. South makes the slam if West leads a heart, the suit East has bid. But East's double forbids the normal heart lead and calls for an unusual lead.

It is not difficult for West, with six cards in the suit North bid, to deduce that East's reason for forbidding a heart lead is that he can ruff a club. So West leads a club, ruffed by East, and East then cashes a heart to put the contract down one — 200 points. With a heart lead South would score 1,860 points.

It must be granted that by using such a convention, the defenders will occasionally forgo an extra 50 or 100 points they could have gained by doubling. But this occasional loss is a mighty cheap price to pay for insuring the defeat of other slams that would otherwise come rolling home.

The opening leader generally has no trouble guessing which suit his partner wants led. Most important of all, he is barred from leading the suit his side has bid. Of the two side suits left, the opening leader's hand will practically always tell him where to attack.

FUN WITH FIGURES

By J. A. H. HUNTER

"How old is Uncle Jack?" Coral asked her teenaged brother. "You know it's his birthday today, and last time we saw him it was also his birthday."

Michael nodded. "Sure, I remember. But you figure it out," he replied. "He was then twice as old as I am now, and he's now three times as old as I was then."

So, how old?

Thanks to Eugene Gavin, Portmarnock, Eire.

(Answer tomorrow)

Yesterday's answer: STEAK was 15249.

Mr. Hunter answers all letters: ideas welcomed.

309 IN MEMORIAM

LAJOIE - In loving memory of our dear son and brother, Bruce. Died May 28, 1978.
We often sit and think of him
when we are all alone,
For memory is the only friend that grief can call its own,
Like ivy on the withered oak,
when all other things decay,
Our love for him will still keep green and never fade away.
Always loved and remembered, Mom, Dad, Donna, Rick and Kay.

LAJOIE - In loving memory of brother Bruce. Died May 28, 1978.
The pearly gates were opened,
A gentle voice said "Come."
And with farewells unspoken,
He gently entered home.
Always remembered, Stan and Diana.

MCGIBBON - In loving memory of Fredrick McGibbon, passed away May 28th, 1979.
Fondly remembered by his wife, daughters, grandchildren and great granchildren.

Cancer patients helped

NEW YORK (UPI) — The first reports from American Cancer Society clinical trials show interferon to be effective against breast cancer and a form of bone cancer in some patients.

But one Cancer Society official said the results have not been as promising as those reported by scientists in Sweden and elsewhere.

Against recurrent breast cancer, the scarce and expensive interferon — made by cells to fight viruses and infections — produced "a partial response" in five of 16 patients, the ACS said. Two additional patients experienced tumor reduction, but not as great as that among the five.

Against multiple myeloma, among 14 patients treated, four have had pretty good regressions.

Preliminary reports on the society's $5.8 million clinical testing program were presented Tuesday at the annual meeting of the American Association for Cancer Research in San Diego.

Another report told of success in stimulating the cells of some cancer patients to produce their own interferon. Inteferon has anti-cell division qualities.

Researchers cautioned against the suggestion a cancer "cure" was at hand, noting that both interferon and the use of a synthetic "interferon inducer" — designed to trick the system into turning out its own interferon — are still experimental.

Dr. Frank J. Rauscher Jr., the ACS vice president for research, said initial results in its interferon testing have not equalled other test results.

The ACS interferon program has been hampered by an extremely short supply of material and the possibly impaired potency of one or two shipments, which had been freeze-dried rather than liquid frozen, he said.

Dr. Derek Kerr of Memorial Sloan-Kettering Cancer Center reported on tests with the interferon inducer, called poly ICLC. The synthetic substance was given to 18 patients who already had undergone extensive treatment for various types of cancer.

The fact that patients' cells could be stimulated into producing interferon did not affect the cancers, he said, describing the patients as seriously ill. In addition, the side effects were considerably more severe and unpleasant for some patients than usual side effects with chemotherapy.

But Kerr said that does not rule out the possibility that the substance might be useful some day for treating cancer patients.

"The activity we have found warrants further testing and more precise, longer term studies to find out how permanent are interferon's effects, exactly how it works, what are its side effects and what the optimum dosage would be," Rauscher said.

Rauscher said, however, there is one big problem — supply.

"The biggest problem is scarcity of material," he said. "We're still trying to break production bottlenecks.

"Although we've now earmarked $5.8 million for interferon research, there's been so little interferon around that we haven't been able to spend the original $2 million."

Enough interferon to treat one patient costs about $30,000.

$165,200 bill kills circus

LONDON (AP) — A bill for $165,200 that the pre-revolutionary government of Iran never paid has helped kill a British circus, the owners say. Mike Denning, a spokesman for the Gerry Cottle circus, said the circus is folding because of debts totalling $472,000. He said the two major blows were a Christmas snowstorm in Britain which cost $94,400 in lost ticket sales, and the cost of performances in Tehran which were never paid for after the ouster of Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi.

Fresh vegetables already gardening

hilda beastall

On this, one of the last days of May, it is possible for local gardeners to have enjoyed fresh green peas and broad beans for supper, plus the usual thinnings of lettuce with crisp scarlet radishes and green onions.

What pleasure it is to get these subtle flavors again after several months of frozen or canned vegetables. If you have no garden plot, there is still time to rent an allotment and make a beginnning this weekend.

Another sowing of early peas (Laxton type) goes in now at the time of the first picking from the earlier sowing.

Be sure there is humus (composted material broken down into soil) in the root area. By keeping this damp with ground level watering once a week much of the pea trouble is avoided. Don't sprinkle pea vines in the evening or leave the surface soil wet before the cool nights common this month and probably in early June.

We get a bit impatient to put out the tomato plants that we've been growing for weeks in small pots and now in large containers. If each one can still be covered at night with a large brown composition nursery pot, or a cardboard carton, the plants should now be safe if put into the ground.

The covers must come off early in the morning. If the night was clear and light frost developed at dawn, take off the covers around 7:30 a.m. If it was cloudy and no frost is apparent they can be moved off earlier.

Squash and marrow plants need the same care; cucumbers too though these grow better in a warmer soil.

Seeds of bush beans and sweet corn, beets and white summer turnips sown now are likely to germinate more uniformly than those sown earlier. However, if it turns dry, watering will be required or there will be no results at all.

Before sowing, take out small trenches about two inches deep along the guideline for sowing. Soak the trench with a gentle trickle from the open ended hose. This allows moisture to sink two inches deep.

Over the damp soil of the trench sprinkle enough good compost to bring the soil up to desired level for sowing the kind of seed. Dampen this again.

Now sow the seeds. Cover with more soil from the compost heap, press down gently with back of rake and leave the surface dry.

According to how soon the different kinds of seeds germinate, sprinkling of the soil surface will be needed after a day or two if there is no rain, or not sufficient to penetrate the top inch or so.

Continued dry weather at this season makes it difficult for gardeners from parts of Canada which have moist and warm weather. Here we must commence deep watering early if the soil below is to retain moisture for summer growth.

French may produce own neutron bombs

PARIS (Reuter) — President Valery Giscard d'Estaing will decide shortly whether France should produce a neutron bomb, a spokesman for his main parliamentary group said Tuesday.

Jean-Marie Daillet said the Union Pour La Democratie Francaise (UDF) group recently submitted a report recommending the manufacture of the neutron bomb to strengthen France's nuclear arsenal.

In the report, the UDF, a coalition of non-Gaullist parties, mentions the Soviet Union for the first time as a potential enemy.

"France must be prepared to face the possibility of an onslaught of Soviet tanks rolling across Europe and threatening our country," Daillet told a news conference. "We can stop such an advance with neutron bombs before resorting to an all-out nuclear war."

Daillet added that "by building up its armored force beyond national defence requirements, the Soviet Union has betrayed itself as the potential adversary in Europe."

The neutron bomb relies on a short-lived flash of radiation which can pierce tanks but leaves buildings unscathed.

The reasons for developing at least 300 neutron warheads, officially called "reduced blast-enhanced radiation weapons," are similar to those that led NATO's military staff to seek the new weapon several years ago.

President Carter scrapped plans for deployment of the weapon after a campaign by the Soviet Union in 1978 and a public uproar in Western Europe.

"That was Carter's big mistake," Daillet said.

France's present nuclear policy is based on massive retaliation against cities.

Marauding teenagers rob, beat subway rider

NEW YORK (AP) — A marauding gang of 10 teenaged girls and one 17-year-old boy were charged with beating and robbing an unintimidated Polish woman on a Brooklyn subway train early today, Transit Authority police said.

The woman, a recent immigrant from Warsaw who cannot speak English, held fast after the group ripped a gold chain from her neck and tried to steal her pocketbook.

"She was beaten, kicked, punched, and knocked down, but wouldn't give up her purse," said Transit Authority Officer Howard Haag.

The incident began around 1 a.m. in the Bensonhurst section of Brooklyn when the youths followed Francis Zarecky, 50, onto the train, Haag said.

The group began to deliberately bump and shove the woman. She moved to another car, but they followed her and continued their harassment.

When the woman got off the train, one of the girls grabbed her gold necklace while the others punched and kicked her, the officer said.

Then they ran to the mezzanine, but returned a several minutes later and tried to steal Mrs. Zarecky's pocketbook.

Venus unveils for Venus

WASHINGTON (AP) — For a planet once thought to be drab and featureless beneath its thick layer of clouds, scientists say Venus has turned out to be a stunner.

The National Aeronautics and Space Administration said today that Pioneer Venus 1 has mapped more than 83 per cent of the planet's surface since arriving in December, 1978, and will have covered 93 per cent by month's end.

The men charting Venus' face have tentatively decided to name the planet's features after women, both real and imagined.

Major features will be named for goddesses, minor ones for other mythical female figures and still smaller objects for famous earth women now deceased.

The proposed designations have to be made official by the International Astronomical Union.

The largest of the highland regions — stretching 9,600 kilometres on Venus' equator — has been named Terra Aphrodite after the Greek goddess of love, known to the Romans as Venus.

Still boycott flare-ups

Times News Services

JOHANNESBURG — About 50 clergymen, including black, white and colored (mixed-race) church leaders, were charged under South Africa's Riotous Assembly Act on Tuesday as police cracked down on leaders of a classroom boycott that began six weeks ago.

The colored-led boycott, to protest against racial inequality in education, flared again in several areas despite warnings by Police Minister Louis Le Grange of tough action.

The church leaders were arrested Monday when they marched to protest the detention of a colored (mixed-race) colleague who has been an outspoken critic of the white-minority government throughout the school strike.

A Canadian, Rev. Tom Anthony, was among the protest marchers who spent the night in jail. Anthony is a member of a delegation headed by Archbishop Ted Scott, Anglican primate of Canada, which is in South Africa for a church conference.

Altogether 53 people, most of them wearing clerical garb and carrying Bibles, were released on remand until July 1 by a Johannesburg court. They include Bishop Desmond Tutu, a prominent black activist, and Timothy Bavin, the white Anglican bishop of Johannesburg.

Their colleague, Rev. John Thorne, was remanded on more serious charges arising from a speech he gave at a protest meeting of colored students last month.

In Barrie, Ont., a United Church minister said the Canadian government should institute economic sanctions against the government of South Africa for arresting the clergymen.

"The government should make strong representation of Canada's displeasure of this violation of human rights," Rev. Ian MacLean told 250 delegates at the United Church's annual conference Tuesday. He added that the protest should be strengthened by economic sanctions.

At the colored university of Western Cape, university authorities confirmed Tuesday that seven staff members had been arrested.

Schools throughout the Cape reported low attendances again as did colored and Indian schools around Johannesburg where hundreds of Indian students protesting against the mass arrest of non-white students and teachers briefly seized their segregated high school today, forcing the principal to barricade himself in his office.

Haitians let down hair for Baby Doc wedding

PORT-AU-PRINCE (Reuter) — Haitains celebrated into the early morning hours after the marriage of their youthful president-for-life, Jean-Claude Duvalier, in a two-hour Roman Catholic ceremony witnessed by 2,125 guests.

Dulavier, 28, and his bride, Michele Bennett, a 29-year-old divorced mother of two, toured the capital in a Cadillac limousine after the ceremony, waving to thousands of cheering Haitians along their route. Many of them had seen the wedding on television monitors placed in city squares.

Fireworks burst in the Caribbean night sky after the ceremony as the couple watched from the steps of the Cathedral where they were wed by the Archbishop of Port-au-Prince, Monsignor Francois Wolff-Ligonde.

Jean-Claude's choice of a wife was the talk of Haiti since it was announced four weeks ago. Some Haitians noted that she was a divorcee with two small sons, but the archbishop issued a statement saying that was no obstacle to a Catholic ceremony because she was married before in the Episcopalian Church.

Others recalled that the father of her ex-husband tried to overthrow Francois Duvalier in 1958 and was killed on the palace grounds with seven companions after the group landed by boat from the Florida Keys.

Melbourne ever-loyal

MELBOURNE (Reuter) — About 100,000 cheering spectators lined the streets as Queen Elizabeth arrived in Melbourne on the last day of her five-day tour of Australia.

Office workers hurled streamers and waved flags as the Queen and Prince Philip drove into downtown Melbourne to open a $26-million city square.

The Queen, who frequently paused to chat to people and accept bouquets, drew loud cheers when she told the crowd at the ceremony: "Nothing could be more heartwarming than to be back among a Melbourne crowd."

Riot-scarred city must be rebuilt

KWANGJU (AP) — South Korean officials announced a series of measures today to help rebuild Kwangju and "heal the tragic scars" from nine days of anti-government rebellion, as riot police braced for new trouble in the nearby port of Mokpo and the capital of Seoul.

Deputy Prime Minister Kim Woun-gie, heading a special committee to provide relief, said the government would offer $8,000 in grants and loans to any Kwangju resident whose home was 80 per cent or more destroyed during the revolt. Lesser amounts were to be available for less damaged property.

In addition, the government said it was releasing rice from its warehouses to help ease food shortages and sending medical supplies and personnel to the city of 800,000, in which hundreds were wounded and killed.

In addition, citizens and private groups in Pusan, Taegu and other cities began campaigns to raise money for relief. The Samsung group, a major Korean business conglomerate, delivered a $330,000 cheque to Home Minister Kim Chong-hwan to help rebuild Kwangju.

Several banks said they would offer special loans, and the South Korean Chamber of Commerce asked the government to exempt businesses in Kwangju from taxes or postpone collection.

The city itself remained calm under firm martial law. Some of the 15 tanks that had occupied the provincial headquarters plaza in downtown Kwangju on Tuesday were gone, and fewer soldiers guarded the streets.

Officials said long-distance phone lines, cut by the government last week to isolate the rebels, were restored. Banks were expected to reopen in a day or so.

Bodies of 17 civilians, most of them university students, who died in the paratroopers' final assault before dawn Tuesday were collected and the provincial headquarters they had used as a stronghold was being cleaned up, with officials and workers back at work.

One of the bodies was identified as that of Moon Jun-chol, a Protestant clergyman and member of the citizens' committee that tried unsuccessfully to negotiate a truce with martial law officials and prevent the troop takeover.

At Mokpo, the port city 67 kilometres south of Kwangju, 3,000 students and sympathizers held a peaceful torchlight march Tuesday night, demanding an end to martial law and freedom for political dissident Kim Dae-jung, a Mokpo native and favorite son of the southern Cholla region, whose arrest May 18 helped trigger the Kwangju strife.

It was the second demonstration in two days in Mokpo, a city of about 200,000, and another was planned for today. No troops were in the city, but police tightened security on major streets, reports said.

In Seoul, 240 kilometres north of Kwangju, more than the usual number of police were on the streets in what sources said was a precaution against rumored demonstrations by high school students.

Martial law was declared in South Korea uafter the assassination of President Park Chung-hee Oct. 26 and extended May 18 after bloody rioting in Seoul.

India buying Soviet arms

AFGHAN-TYPE CRISIS: It's really a Russian wolfhound — and Stephanie Gibson of Atlanta, Ga., knows how to diffuse the situation, which arose when she entered Michael in her school pet show.

NEW DELHI (UPI) — India has signed a $1.6 billion agreement to buy weapons from the Soviet Union in New Delhi's largest arms purchase in history, Defence Ministry sources said today.

Western experts in Asia said the arms agreement will hurt the U.S. policy of trying lure the Indians away from the Soviet Union to present a unified front in the Indian Subcontinent against the Soviet invasion of Afghanistan.

Calling the agreement ominous, the experts said the long-term weapons deal, believed to involve sophisticated T-72 tanks and MiG-23 fighters, could not but help to draw India further in the Soviet embrace.

They noted that this month Washington relented on its policy against nuclear proliferation and agreed to sell India nuclear fuel but this apparently was not enough to tempt the Indians.

The agreement to buy Soviet arms on credit was signed by an Indian delegation led by Defense Minister S.S. Sidhu who concluded a week-long Moscow visit Tuesday, the sources said.

The $1.6 billion credit is repayable over 17 years and carries a low interest rate, the sources said. The exact rate was not disclosed.

"This is the largest arms contract India has so far signed with any country and is the most favorable," the sources said.

They refused to disclose what types of weapons Indians are buying.

The latest arms deal will make India more dependent on the Soviets for arms, according to defense observers. The Soviets already have supplied India a variety of arms, including MiG-21s, which India has been producing for the past several years.

The sources had indicated before the delegation's departure on May 18 that India planned to buy aircraft, tanks, patrol vessels and missiles.

Negotiations for the arms deal with the Soviets started nearly a year ago when the Janata government was in power. The negotiations later were completed when an Indian defense delegation visited Moscow shortly after Prime Minister Indira Gandhi regained power in January.

Talks could settle crisis IF: Brezhnev

MOSCOW (CP) — Soviet President Leonid Brezhnev said Tuesday night a political settlement of the Afghanistan crisis is possible, but that it would require the end of armed invasions from neighboring countries.

Brezhnev, speaking at a dinner in honor of visiting South Yemeni leader Ali Nasser Mohammed, also made a strong attack on the United States, accusing it of pursuing a militaristic course in its foreign policy.

Soviet leaders have said several times since Moscow sent troops into Afghanistan last December that there would be no withdrawal until all outside aggression ceased — a formula which could ensure Moscow's presence there almost indefinitely.

The Afghan government made a similar proposal earlier this month.

South Yemen, bound by a 20-year friendship treaty with the Soviet Union, is one of the few Moslem countries backing Soviet intervention in Afghanistan.

Carter, Reagan big winners in four states

Washington Star

As expected, President Carter and Ronald Reagan Tuesday won a big majority of delegates elected in the presidential primaries in Arkansas, Idaho, Kentucky and Nevada with the results giving Reagan the delegates he needs to win the Republican nomination.

Carter was still just short of a majority of the Democratic delegates which he should easily top in next week's primaries, the last of the year.

By The Washington Star's delegate count, returns from Tuesday's primaries put Carter's total at 1,644 — just 22 less than he will need at the convention in August. His rival, Sen. Edward Kennedy, was lagging even further behind with a total of 845.

Carter went into Tuesday's primaries with 1,578 delegates, compared to 825 for Kennedy. Reagan began the day with 982, just 16 fewer than the 998 he needed, compared to 199 for George Bush. In The Star's delegate count, however, 45 Bush delegates were switched to the Reagan column after Bush on Monday conceded the nomination and announced that he would do no more active campaigning.

About 5 per cent, 4,843 votes, went to Rep. John Anderson of Illinois — who was still on the ballot even though he is now running as an independent. The uncommitted choice drew 2,931 votes, or 3 per cent, and minor candidates split the rest.

Anderson tried unsuccessfully to get off the Kentucky ballot because state law prohibits a candidate who has lost a major party primary from running in the general election as an independent.

Bloody clash by Moslems

BEIRUT (AP) — Rival Moslem factions, using mortars, rockets and machine guns, battled today in Beirut and southern Lebanon and police said first reports indicated there were at least 18 dead and 20 wounded.

A police spokesman said the fighting, which erupted Tuesday, was the worst flare-up among Moslems since the end of the 19-month Lebanese civil war in 1976. The war pitted Christian rightists against an alliance of leftist Moslems and Palestinian guerrillas.

The latest fighting in Lebanon mirrored the border war between Iran and Iraq, which has been simmering for several months over rival territorial and efforts by the two countries to exert their influence over the oil-rich Persian Gulf. The fighting in Lebanon pitted members of the Amal Moslem militia, the military arm of nation's pro-Iranian Shiite Moslem community, against other Lebanese Moslem and Palestinian guerrilla groups loyal to Iraq.

The various factions blamed each other for starting the bloodshed.

Rival militiamen traded hit-and-run assaults in three low-income residential quarters on the southern edge of Beirut, the Lebanese capital. The fighting drove thousands of residents into basements and bomb shelters.

Asbestos case award $1.2M

LONG BEACH, Calif. (AP) — A Superior Court jury has ordered two asbestos manufacturers to pay damages amounting to $1.2 million to a former shipyard worker who says he developed a serious lung illness from inhaling asbestos fibres.

The jury returned the verdict Tuesday, six days after beginning deliberations in the case of Richard Hogard, 40, who sued Johns Manville and Raybestos Manhattan Inc.

Hogard, formerly employed at the Long Beach Naval Shipyard, claimed the two companies failed to warn workers of potential dangers from asbestos insulation material which caused him to suffer from asbestosis — scaring of lung tissue.

During the trial, Johns Manville argued that Hogard suffered from bronchitis not asbestosis.

Jurors are scheduled to return to court June 2 to determine whether punitive damages should be levied against the two companies.

Back-to-wall billionaires pledge all but kitchen sinks

DALLAS (AP) — Three Hunt brothers apparently pledged almost everything they own to get $1.1 billion in credit to offset staggering losses in the silver market.

The credit agreement was approved Tuesday for the brothers, Nelson Bunker, W. Herbert and Lamar Hunt.

It was signed by 13 banks, headed by Morgan Guaranty Trust Co. and First National Bank of Dallas and Placid Oil Co., which is held in six different trusts for the benefit of members of the Hunt family.

Each of the three Hunts detailed his assets in financial statements filed earlier this month at the Dallas County courthouse.

The Hunts, particularly Bunker and Nelson, ran up an estimated $1.7 billion in debts after silver prices tumbled. The Hunts had been speculating in the silver market for months and had amassed a large fortune before the price dropped from $47 an ounce Jan. 21 to a low of $10.80 an ounce March 27.

The statements show that besides their extensive silver holdings and silver-related debts, the Hunts have put up numerous possessions — the values of which may far surpass their debt.

The list includes cattle ranches, bracelets, race horses, rings, South African kruggerands, Greek statues, paintings, petroleum leases, silver bullion, Roman coins and antiques.

The statements also include such things as office machines, desks, cattle feeders, water coolers, irrigation pumps, lawn mowers, grain spreaders and a Sears, Roebuck and Co. air conditioner.

Bunker Hunt listed at least 69,485 head of cattle on ranches in Texas, Colorado, Montana, Oklahoma, California, Mississippi and Kentucky. He listed hundreds of thoroughbred race horses, bred in the U.S. and abroad.

Lamar Hunt listed investments — in the form of promissory notes — to the World Championship Tennis Academy ($621,853), the WCT tour ($4,872,860), the Dallas Tornado soccer team ($1,781,900), the Chicago Bulls professional basketball team ($63,000) and all the art objects and household goods in his North Dallas home.

Herbert Hunt listed an Etruscan bronze statuette from the 3rd century B.C., a bronze statuette of a sphinx from western Greece, dated 530 B.C., described as a "very important piece from a very rare area."

The trio listed investments in Hunt Energy Corp., Hunt International Petroleum Co., and Planet Petroleum Co., an oil exploration joint venture the brothers created in 1956.

There are also investments by the three brothers in Holiday Hills, the Aquatic Exploration Co., Petromar Services and Penrod Drilling Co., the world's largest privately-held drilling concern.

The personal properties are pledged to Placid Oil, largest of the Hunt commercial interests.

Italian terrorists kill again

ROME (AP) — Gunmen shot and killed one of Italy's best known journalists in Milan today and assassinated a policemen and wounded two other officers outside a Rome high school, authorities said.

A rightist terrorist group, Armed Revolutionary Nuclei, claimed responsiblity for the Rome attack; no one publicly owned up to the Milan one.

Walter Tobagi, 33, of Italy's biggest newspaper, Corriere della Sera, was shot near his Milan home.

Earlier four men fire on policemen on a crowded Rome street. A taxi driver also was wounded.

Police said one pair of gunmen opened fire from a car and wounded a policeman on guard outside the school in northeast Rome.

Yugoslavia to see Carter

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter will travel to Yugoslavia, Spain, the Vatican and Portugal during his trip to Europe in June for an economic summit in Venice, Italy, the White House announced.

He will pay a state visit to Italy on June 19-21 before the June 22-23 summit.

Iranian parliament meets today

Times News Services

TEHRAN — Iran's Islamic parliament convened today with a message from the Ayatollah Khomeini urging the assembly to fight foreign influences and a warning from militants that lawmakers must furnish an "acceptable reason" if they decide not to try the 53 American hostages.

Khomeini has given the parliament the task of deciding the fate of the captive Americans, who are spending their 206th day as hostages.

After Khomeini's only son, Sayed Ahmad, read his father's message to the parliament, its members chanted: "We are your soldiers, Khomeini. We take orders from you, Khomeini."

Then the militants who seized the U.S. embassy Nov. 4 sent a six-point communique to parliament, according to Tehran Radio. The final point was a warning:

"Our great leader, Imam Khomeini, at the beginning of hostage-taking said if the United States will return the former shah and his stolen wealth, the hostages . . . will be freed and expelled from Iran. Otherwise, they will be tried and punished and this demand has been repeated and supported by the people all this time."

The message added, "Any decision other than this has to have an acceptable reason for the people of Iran."

The Islamic Republican Party — the party controlling the new parliament — also took a hard line, hinting it would vote to try the hostages as spies and demand "damages" from the U.S.

United Nations envoy Adib Daoudy, in Tehran in an attempt to revive the UN Commission on Iran, originally formed in an effort to free the hostages, was present at the opening of the parliament.

The Islamic Republican Party, in a commentary published in its official newspaper on the eve condemned the UN attempt to solve the crisis.

Meanwhile, Hassan Habibi, the Revolutionary Council member who is widely considered a compromise choice to become prime minister, said in an interview that discussion of who will get the post would not take place for the next three weeks, thus indicating further delay in a discussion on the hostage issue.

By other official estimates, the parliament was scheduled to finish all other business, including the choice of a prime minister, by late June and then get busy with the critical decision on the captive Americans.

In another development, the Soviet Union and tradesmen in Iran's troubled Azerbaijan region have forged a commercial agreement that could undercut the authority of the central government in Tehran.

Iranian emigre sources in Washington said the terms include credits to Azerbaijani merchants that will permit them to buy Russian industrial goods as well as meat, poultry and dairy products that are in short supply.

Food prices in Azerbaijan have increased as much as fourfold since the early 1979 revolution that toppled Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi and there are severe food shortages. Under the agreement, shipments will be made regularly across the lightly policed border from the Soviet Union.

The Russians were forced out of Azerbaijan in 1946, but have not given up their designs on the province.

Last month, faced with a partial U.S. and European embargo, Iran decided to maintain economic ties with the Soviet Union. Ties with Azerbaijan, however, were not part of that agreement.

Titanic far costlier on film

scott's world

by vernon scott

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — In 1912, it cost England a piddling $4 million to build the Titanic, the greatest, safest luxury liner in the world which collided with an iceberg and sank on its maiden voyage.

In 1980 it cost Sir Lew Grade and his Marble Arch Productions almost 10 times as much — $30 million so far — to produce Raise The Titanic! from Clive Cussler's best-selling novel.

A ¾-inch-to-the-foot, 55-foot-long, 12-foot-high Titanic model cost $375,000 alone. Smaller models brought the miniature fleet cost to $1 million.

When Raise The Titanic! is released this July it will be one of the most expensive films in history, ranking right up there with Apocalypse Now, 1941 and the unreleased Heaven's Gate and The Blues Brothers.

The most costly aspect of the film was building a tank — $3.5 million — in which the Titanic could be realistically photographed under controlled conditions at the bottom of the ocean.

And therein lies an epic tale of movie extravagance.

Three years ago Lord Grade paid $500,000 for film rights to the novel. Stanley Kramer took over as producer-director.

Ten months into the project, Kramer exited. William Frye, a logical choice, was appointed producer. Frye made Airport 1977, featuring a jetliner on the bottom of the ocean which is floated to the surface.

Frye was immediately confronted by the almost insurmountable problem of determining where to shoot the underwater footage of the model of the ship as it is supposedly resting 12,000 feet under the surface of the Atlantic.

To begin with, the Titanic model was built and reposed at the CBS Studio Center in the semi-arid San Fernando Valley. The nearest body of water was the totally dry Los Angeles riverbed.

"Kramer had planned to film the undersea footage near Long Beach or off the coast of Catalina," said Frye, an urbane and articulate man. "But we couldn't shoot in the ocean at shallow depths because of the fish and plant life.

"At 12,000 feet there are no fish or living plants. So we had to find a tank big enough to hold the model and make it all look realistic."

It became evident Marble Arch would have to build its own tank. The British company chose Malta where there already was a 200 by 300-foot, 5-foot deep surface tank (too shallow for its purposes) overhanging the Mediterranean.

Marble Arch then constructed a deeper round tank 350 feet in diameter, holding 9 million gallons of sea water. The tank, a year in the building, is the largest in the world.

Frye found himself confronted by another puzzle. How to transport the 55-foot model from the San Fernando Valley to the Mediterranean, via the Panama Canal, and into the tank at Malta.

Last October Frye called his friend Antonio D'Amico, an Italian shipping magnate, who agreed to ship the model, along with smaller models, on the deck of one of his freighters as far as Naples. The cost: a paltry $150,000.

"First," said Frye, "we had to get Los Angeles county and city permission to lug our huge model on a truck bed down the freeways to the San Pedro docks. That was a spectacular operation in itself."

Riot-scarred city must be rebuilt

KWANGJU (AP) — South Korean officials announced a series of measures today to help rebuild Kwangju and "heal the tragic scars" from nine days of anti-government rebellion, as riot police braced for new trouble in the nearby port of Mokpo and the capital of Seoul.

Deputy Prime Minister Kim Woun-gie, heading a special committee to provide relief, said the government would offer $8,000 in grants and loans to any Kwangju resident whose home was 80 per cent or more destroyed during the revolt. Lesser amounts were to be available for less damaged property.

In addition, the government said it was releasing rice from its warehouses to help ease food shortages and sending medical supplies and personnel to the city of 800,000, in which hundreds were wounded and killed.

In addition, citizens and private groups in Pusan, Taegu and other cities began campaigns to raise money for relief. The Samsung group, a major Korean business conglomerate, delivered a $330,000 cheque to Home Minister Kim Chong-hwan to help rebuild Kwangju.

Several banks said they would offer special loans, and the South Korean Chamber of Commerce asked the government to exempt businesses in Kwangju from taxes or postpone collection.

The city itself remained calm under firm martial law. Some of the 15 tanks that had occupied the provincial headquarters plaza in downtown Kwangju on Tuesday were gone, and fewer soldiers guarded the streets.

Officials said long-distance phone lines, cut by the government last week to isolate the rebels, were restored. Banks were expected to reopen in a day or so.

Bodies of 17 civilians, most of them university students, who died in the paratroopers' final assault before dawn Tuesday were collected and the provincial headquarters they had used as a stronghold was being cleaned up, with officials and workers back at work.

One of the bodies was identified as that of Moon Jun-chol, a Protestant clergyman and member of the citizens' committee that tried unsuccessfully to negotiate a truce with martial law officials and prevent the troop takeover.

At Mokpo, the port city 67 kilometres south of Kwangju, 3,000 students and sympathizers held a peaceful torchlight march Tuesday night, demanding an end to martial law and freedom for political dissident Kim Dae-jung, a Mokpo native and favorite son of the southern Cholla region, whose arrest May 18 helped trigger the Kwangju strife.

It was the second demonstration in two days in Mokpo, a city of about 200,000, and another was planned for today. No troops were in the city, but police tightened security on major streets, reports said.

In Seoul, 240 kilometres north of Kwangju, more than the usual number of police were on the streets in what sources said was a precaution against rumored demonstrations by high school students.

Martial law was declared in South Korea uafter the assassination of President Park Chung-hee Oct. 26 and extended May 18 after bloody rioting in Seoul.

India buying Soviet arms

AFGHAN-TYPE CRISIS: It's really a Russian wolfhound — and Stephanie Gibson of Atlanta, Ga., knows how to diffuse the situation, which arose when she entered Michael in her school pet show.

NEW DELHI (UPI) — India has signed a $1.6 billion agreement to buy weapons from the Soviet Union in New Delhi's largest arms purchase in history, Defence Ministry sources said today.

Western experts in Asia said the arms agreement will hurt the U.S. policy of trying lure the Indians away from the Soviet Union to present a unified front in the Indian Subcontinent against the Soviet invasion of Afghanistan.

Calling the agreement ominous, the experts said the long-term weapons deal, believed to involve sophisticated T-72 tanks and MiG-23 fighters, could not but help to draw India further in the Soviet embrace.

They noted that this month Washington relented on its policy against nuclear proliferation and agreed to sell India nuclear fuel but this apparently was not enough to tempt the Indians.

The agreement to buy Soviet arms on credit was signed by an Indian delegation led by Defense Minister S.S. Sidhu who concluded a week-long Moscow visit Tuesday, the sources said.

The $1.6 billion credit is repayable over 17 years and carries a low interest rate, the sources said. The exact rate was not disclosed.

"This is the largest arms contract India has so far signed with any country and is the most favorable," the sources said.

They refused to disclose what types of weapons Indians are buying.

The latest arms deal will make India more dependent on the Soviets for arms, according to defense observers. The Soviets already have supplied India a variety of arms, including MiG-21s, which India has been producing for the past several years.

The sources had indicated before the delegation's departure on May 18 that India planned to buy aircraft, tanks, patrol vessels and missiles.

Negotiations for the arms deal with the Soviets started nearly a year ago when the Janata government was in power. The negotiations later were completed when an Indian defense delegation visited Moscow shortly after Prime Minister Indira Gandhi regained power in January.

Talks could settle crisis IF: Brezhnev

MOSCOW (CP) — Soviet President Leonid Brezhnev said Tuesday night a political settlement of the Afghanistan crisis is possible, but that it would require the end of armed invasions from neighboring countries.

Brezhnev, speaking at a dinner in honor of visiting South Yemeni leader Ali Nasser Mohammed, also made a strong attack on the United States, accusing it of pursuing a militaristic course in its foreign policy.

Soviet leaders have said several times since Moscow sent troops into Afghanistan last December that there would be no withdrawal until all outside aggression ceased — a formula which could ensure Moscow's presence there almost indefinitely.

The Afghan government made a similar proposal earlier this month.

South Yemen, bound by a 20-year friendship treaty with the Soviet Union, is one of the few Moslem countries backing Soviet intervention in Afghanistan.

Carter, Reagan big winners in four states

Washington Star

As expected, President Carter and Ronald Reagan Tuesday won a big majority of delegates elected in the presidential primaries in Arkansas, Idaho, Kentucky and Nevada with the results giving Reagan the delegates he needs to win the Republican nomination.

Carter was still just short of a majority of the Democratic delegates which he should easily top in next week's primaries, the last of the year.

By The Washington Star's delegate count, returns from Tuesday's primaries put Carter's total at 1,644 — just 22 less than he will need at the convention in August. His rival, Sen. Edward Kennedy, was lagging even further behind with a total of 845.

Carter went into Tuesday's primaries with 1,578 delegates, compared to 825 for Kennedy. Reagan began the day with 982, just 16 fewer than the 998 he needed, compared to 199 for George Bush. In The Star's delegate count, however, 45 Bush delegates were switched to the Reagan column after Bush on Monday conceded the nomination and announced that he would do no more active campaigning.

About 5 per cent, 4,843 votes, went to Rep. John Anderson of Illinois — who was still on the ballot even though he is now running as an independent. The uncommitted choice drew 2,931 votes, or 3 per cent, and minor candidates split the rest.

Anderson tried unsuccessfully to get off the Kentucky ballot because state law prohibits a candidate who has lost a major party primary from running in the general election as an independent.

Bloody clash by Moslems

BEIRUT (AP) — Rival Moslem factions, using mortars, rockets and machine guns, battled today in Beirut and southern Lebanon and police said first reports indicated there were at least 18 dead and 20 wounded.

A police spokesman said the fighting, which erupted Tuesday, was the worst flare-up among Moslems since the end of the 19-month Lebanese civil war in 1976. The war pitted Christian rightists against an alliance of leftist Moslems and Palestinian guerrillas.

The latest fighting in Lebanon mirrored the border war between Iran and Iraq, which has been simmering for several months over rival territorial and efforts by the two countries to exert their influence over the oil-rich Persian Gulf. The fighting in Lebanon pitted members of the Amal Moslem militia, the military arm of nation's pro-Iranian Shiite Moslem community, against other Lebanese Moslem and Palestinian guerrilla groups loyal to Iraq.

The various factions blamed each other for starting the bloodshed.

Rival militiamen traded hit-and-run assaults in three low-income residential quarters on the southern edge of Beirut, the Lebanese capital. The fighting drove thousands of residents into basements and bomb shelters.

Asbestos case award $1.2M

LONG BEACH, Calif. (AP) — A Superior Court jury has ordered two asbestos manufacturers to pay damages amounting to $1.2 million to a former shipyard worker who says he developed a serious lung illness from inhaling asbestos fibres.

The jury returned the verdict Tuesday, six days after beginning deliberations in the case of Richard Hogard, 40, who sued Johns Manville and Raybestos Manhattan Inc.

Hogard, formerly employed at the Long Beach Naval Shipyard, claimed the two companies failed to warn workers of potential dangers from asbestos insulation material which caused him to suffer from asbestosis — scaring of lung tissue.

During the trial, Johns Manville argued that Hogard suffered from bronchitis not asbestosis.

Jurors are scheduled to return to court June 2 to determine whether punitive damages should be levied against the two companies.
